SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL IS DEAD

LBJ ASKS BUDGET OF 100 BILLION

Tax Cuts Part of His Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sends to Congress today the cost estimate for launching his "Great Society" — a fiscal 1966 budget approaching $100 billion.

It calls for repeal and reduction of excise taxes which administration sources have estimated at around $1.5 billion, to stimulate the economy and rid business of troublesome and inequitable "nuisance" levies.

The revenue loss will contribute to another year of red-ink federal financing, but officials have predicted that the deficit for the year starting next July 1 will be somewhat smaller than this year's.

The President is known to have carved about $10 billion from agency requests submitted last fall. Government sources foresee a spending total midway between $99 billion and $100 billion.

This cost-cutting achievement was even more remarkable than last year's actual reversal of the upward trend of federal spending, in the opinion of budget experts, because the President was in a two-way squeeze.

Room had to be found for the education, antipoverty, urban, and resource development programs he has promised as elements of the "Great Society" program. At the same time, the inescapable "built-in" cost increases of laws already on the books could themselves have shoved the budget over $100 billion.

Across-the-board cost-cutting pressure has been applied, and low-priority programs have been scaled down to make room for the new high-priority proposals.

The Pentagon, it has been reported, will reduce its spending slightly to about $49 billion. The original Defense Department budget for this year was $51.2 billion, but Secretary Robert S. McNamara has whittled about $1 billion from it.

As Johnson prepared to send his budget to Congress, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., called for an end to federal deficits.

By July 1, he said, the federal government "will have operated in the red for 30 of 36 years." He predicted that the national debt, now $318 billion, "will go higher."

Byrd, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, criticized the system under which the budget is divided into a dozen or more separate bills, many of which permit spending over several years.

"Congress does not know whether it is authorizing deficit, balancing the budget, or developing a surplus," Byrd's statement said.

He proposed that all spending authority be placed in a single package and then limited by the estimates of federal income or revenue during that same period.

More of I-55 Has Opened For Traffic

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. -- A ten-mile section of Interstate Highway 55, located about two miles south of Blytheville at the Dogwood intersection, and running north of the city to the Missouri state line will be open about the middle of February, according to an announcement by W. H. Wyatt, in charge of the dedication arrangements. It will be last leg of this highway in Arkansas.

Interstate 55 from south of Blytheville to Memphis is now open and is being used by the traveling public. The new four-lane stretch is now completed from Sikeston north to Benton, and from Benton to Scott City will be opened around March 1. It will then be opened to north of Jackson for a total of over 50 miles to the north.

The stretch from Sikeston to New Madrid, a distance of 21 miles, is now under construction, and should be completed within a year, leaving two more sections to be completed, which according to District Engineer W. D. Carney, would follow soon after. They are from New Madrid to south of Portageville for 14 miles, and from Portageville to south of Hayti for 26 miles, which should complete the southern section to Memphis.

The northern stretch from St. Louis to Festus is under construction, but the 75-mile stretch from Festus south is still in the blueprint stage.

Appoint Swaim Brothers

Five young men from Southeast Missouri have been nominated by Representative Paul C. Jones as principal appointees to the three service academies, and eight others were named as either first or second alternates. The five appointees will report for duty about July 1, at either the Air Force Academy, the U. S. Military Academy or the U. S. Naval Academy.

The two nominations for principal appointments to the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, went to two brothers, Allan and Norman Swaim, sons of Colonel and Mrs. Allan L. Swaim, former residents of Sikeston who still maintain their legal residence in Scott County while the father is the Senior Army Advisor with the Fifth Army Advisor group at Des Moines, Iowa. Allan Swaim is a freshman at the University of Wisconsin, while his brother Norman will finish the Manlius School at Manlius, New York, in June of this year.

William Rogers Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jones Jr., of Kennett, who will graduate this year from the Kennett High School, has been nominated as the principal appointee to the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. His first alternate is Albert Lee Lawrence, Jr., who will graduate this year from the Caruthersville High School.

There were also two principal nominations for the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, one of these going to Jim Richard Bruce, II, graduate of the Kennett High School, who is now in his second year at the Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau. He is a son of Richard and Anna Martin Bruce of Kennett.

The other principal appointment to West Point went to Richard McAdoo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. McAdoo of Bloomfield, where Richard will be graduated from high school this spring.

One of the first alternate appointments for the Air Force Academy went to Gregory Gremminger, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Gremminger of Ste. Schott, former residents of Scott county where they maintain their legal residence while living in Tacoma, Wash., where Major Schott is stationed with the Air Force, is first alternate to Norman Swaim.

First alternate to Jim Bruce, for the Military Academy, is Randy Glenn Holdman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Holdman of Bonne Terre, where he will be graduated from high school this year. The second alternate is Carl Rodney Fisher of Caruthersville, son of Mrs. John T. Mitchum, who will be graduated from the Caruthersville High School this year.

VA Plans To Cut Spending by More Than 700 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration plans to cut its spending of appropriated funds by more than $700 million in the year starting July 1.

But President Johnson's budget, sent to Congress today, says due to anticipated receipts of more than $1 billion from mortgage sales, "veterans benefits and services under the basic, continuing compensation, pension, and medical care programs will be at record levels in (fiscal year) 1966.

The budget lists expenditures at $4,649,000,000, compared with $5,376,000,000 this year.

More than $100 million will go to cover the cost of increased pension rates and to establish new nursing home programs, under legislation approved in Congress last year.

The budget includes a request for $97,006,000 to finance construction during 1965-66 and subsequent years, until the projects are completed, of replacement and relocated hospitals.

The major items include:

$11,815,000 for a 480-bed hospital at Columbia, Mo., the construction contract to be awarded in June 1966.

President Plans To Be At Funeral If He Is Able to

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill lay at rest today while the world awaited the somber magnificence of a state funeral he planned for himself.

Monarchs, presidents and veteran statesmen will follow his coffin on its last journey Saturday. President Johnson said he would be among them if sufficiently recovered from the cold that sent him to the hospital over the weekend.

Churchill died shortly after 8 a.m. — 3 a.m., EST — Sunday at No. 28 Hyde Park Gate, the London house in which he had lived since retiring from the premiership in 1955. Two months past his 90th birthday, he had suffered a stroke nine days before. Medical experts said he died peacefully and without pain.

As the world's tributes flowed in for the greatest Englishman of modern times, friends revealed that he first started planning his funeral ceremony during World War II.

In December 1943, he was in Cairo after talks with President Roosevelt and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and caught a cold which turned to pneumonia.

Half jokingly he told aides: "They'll have to give me a state funeral. President Roosevelt will have to come to London to attend it."

From this remark grew Churchill's "funeral book," laying down the procedure he wanted followed and even detailing the names of military units which should attend.

In 1954 he returned to the exercise. Some details inevitably were changed but the outline remained, including a funeral progress up the Thames River of the kind accorded in 1805 to Admiral Lord Nelson, hero of Britain's naval victories over the French.

Determined that everything should go without a hitch, he toured the route the cortege will take. The route is a study in stone of Churchill's life.

From the house where he spent his last years in London, the coffin will go on Wednesday to Westminster Hall, the ancient seat of England's freedoms, adjoining the House of Commons which was his stage.

There it will lie in state for three days. Then through Whitehall, the seat of government, and past his old residence as prime minister, at No. 10 Downing Street.

On down the Strand, with memories here of Churchillian nights out at the Savoy Grill and the now vanished Romano's, favorite haunt of Edwardian London.

Then into Fleet Street, London's newspaper row to which Churchill turned for a platform and for income in his youth and again in the years of political eclipse after World War I.

Finally to St. Paul's, Sir Christopher Wren's domed masterpiece where Britain traditionally takes leave of its heroes.

From St. Paul's the cortege will travel to the Thames. In the shadow of the tower Churchill's coffin will be put aboard a barge to travel up river to a pier near Waterloo Station.

Here the public ceremonial ends. The family will join the coffin on a private train and Churchill will be buried near his parents in a village churchyard in the heart of England.

Parliament was called together this afternoon to hear political leaders' tributes to Churchill and give formal approval to Queen Elizabeth's request that the funeral be made a state occasion.

This approval is automatic. It is technically necessary since the funeral will involve some governmental expense.

The end was announced in a terse bulletin signed by his physician and lifelong friend, Lord Moran. At his bedside were Lady Churchill, his son, and his two daughters.

The queen, among the first to be informed of his death, immediately sent Lady Churchill this message:

"The news of Sir Winston's death cause inexpressible grief to me and my husband. We send our deepest sympathy to you and your family.

"The whole world is the poorer by the loss of his many-sided genius, while the survival of this country and the sister nations of the Commonwealth in the face of the greatest danger that has ever threatened them will be a perpetual memorial to his leadership, his vision, and his indomitable courage."

The funeral is expected to bring together the largest concourse of statesmen since that of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

Diplomats said President Charles de Gaulle has unofficially let it be known that he expects to come. They said the Soviet representative is likely to be President Anastas Mikoyan, whom Churchill knew well, or the new premier, Alexei N. Kosygin.

It will be the first state funeral for a British commoner since that of Prime Minister William E. Gladstone 67 years ago. The service will be conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England.

Burial will be in the small country churchyard in Bladon, 70 miles northwest of London. It is on the great Blenheim estate, home of the dukes of Marlborough, where Churchill was born. His father, Lord Randolph Churchill, was a son of the seventh duke, and Sir Winston died on the 71st anniversary of Lord Randolph's death.

Rooming House Damaged By Fire

The rooming house owned by Jake Hunt, located at Alabama and Osage street, was badly damaged by fire and water Saturday night. The fire department was called at 5:30 p.m. Saturday to extinguish the blaze, and were called back at 1 a.m. Sunday when the building again caught fire.

Recommends 500 Million Cut for Agriculture

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson recommended a $500 million cutback in government spending on agriculture today, with most of the decrease to come in price support programs.

The President asked Congress to appropriate $6,357,420,000 to the Department of Agriculture in the forthcoming fiscal year, $500 million less than estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year.

The President recommended price support programs be set at $1.68 billion next year in contrast with this year's estimated $2.29 billion.

Johnson made it clear that his policies will be in the direction of helping persons not needed in agriculture to shift to other ways of making a living.

Most other activities were budgeted at or near present spending levels. This includes $1.73 billion for the food for peace program which, in the overall budget, is included as a foreign aid expenditure; $733 million for the agricultural marketing service which includes such programs as food stamps and school lunches; and $618 million for the agricultural stabilization and conservation service.

The prospective $430 million reduction in price support expenditures is based on the fact that supports for some crops — cotton, feed grains and rice — to be grown this crop year have been reduced.

Johnson said he will ask that present stabilization programs for cotton, feed grains and wheat be extended, with "improvements" to be recommended later.

There are now about 3.2 million farms in this country.

Johnson said he had directed Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman to come up with proposals by which the government could help the rural poor find new opportunities.

The President recommended additional funds to establish small offices of the department's Rural Community Development Service in 20 additional states. These offices would become the focal point of programs to develop non-farm employment opportunities in rural areas.

Johnson again asked that the $225 million agricultural conservation subsidy program be reduced to $120 million for the 1966 crop year. Payments go to farmers to help finance soil and water conservation practices. Last Year, Congress refused to cut the program.

Malcolm Says Electronic Machines To Speed Mail

Postmaster Pleas Malcolm said today he has received word from Postmaster General John A. Gronouski in Washington, D. C. that a big "break-through" has now been made on electronic machines to "read" ZIP-coded addresses on mail.

The Postmaster General said he expects to begin installing these sophisticated new machines in major post offices starting in about a year, Postmaster Malcolm said.

These new machines will be able to sort, as well as read, at the rate of 35,000 letters an hour, or about the same as 20 men could sort in the same length of time.

The offices to get the address readers have not been announced, but the local postmaster said they will have a significant effect on the mail in and out of each community regardless of whether it gets the new machines.

This is because they will speed incoming mail to smaller offices from major cities and step up the dispatch of mail deposited in smaller communities but which must be processed enroute at major mail massing points.

The postmaster emphasized, however, introduction of the "seeing eye" device next year does not mean ZIP Code isn't useful already.

"ZIP CODE", he explained, "is important in mail handling under the system of mail processing already in use which will continue to be in use as the basic system at most points. These machines will be just another step -- in conjunction with the mechanical mail sorting machines we have developed -- to help keep pace with the growing volumes of mail. Neither will the machines endanger jobs -- they will only help us meet mail expansion with minimum manpower expansion."

YMCA WEEK

Next to the cross and the crescent, the YMCA's Red Triangle is the world's most widely known religious symbol. And this splendid organization will be given thoroughly earned recognition during YMCA Week, January 24-31.

The "Y" was organized 121 years ago in London for the purpose of "the improvement of the spiritual and mental condition of young men engaged in houses of business." Shortly after its transplantation to America in 1851, it broadened its aims to include improving minds, bodies, spirits and the social outlook of youth on all levels.

Among its most notable achievements has been 75 years of work in two major fields of current interest -- the teen-ager and our relations with other peoples of the world. The largest single teen-ager program in North America today- the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y program of the "Y" -- has over 350,000 boy and girl members in more than 12,000 clubs. With "service" being the major aim, the clubs have as their purpose "to create, maintain and extend throughout school and community high standards of Christian character." And abroad the "Y" is at work in 83 countries and territories. Significantly, the World Alliance of YMCA's is today headed by an African, Dr. Charles Sherman of Liberia.

The "Y" has earned your salute -- not only during the Week honoring it but every week.

If fire destroyed your home today you might be in for an even ruder shock than you think. Because the chances are better than even that your insurance coverage is insufficient to replace either your home or your personal possessions.

If your home is more than three years old, in fact, it is almost certainly underinsured if you haven't updated your home insurance coverage since you moved in.

The rise in home construction costs and personal property values in recent years has caused more than half of all insured homes in the United States to be underinsured.

Figures computed reveal that on a national average the value of personal property items, from electric can openers to color TV sets, has jumped by 31 per cent in the last 10 years.

Home construction costs have risen by 19 per cent in the same period, the company said.

In a fairly typical situation, it would cost a homeowner a tidy $4,400 of his own money today to replace a home and possessions that were fully insured 10 years ago.

That figure is based on statistical averages showing that it would cost $17,850 now to build a home that cost $15,000 to build 10 years ago, and that the family with personal property valued at $5,000 then would have $6,550 worth of such goods now.

The latter increase is attributable not only to the rise in prices of personal property items over the years, but also to the rise in their quantity and quality as a result of the general improvement in American living standards.

The statistics become progressively more dramatic the further back you take them. Home construction costs have risen by an average 103 per cent since 1945, for example, and personal property values are up a whopping 155 per cent.

To guard against possible loss from underinsurance, periodic reviews of homeowners policies or fire coverages are recommended.

Additionally, an up-to-date inventory of personal property and its estimated values should be kept in your office or safe deposit box or elsewhere away from the home to guide you in reporting losses to your insurance company in the event of fire or other misfortune.

In view of the fact that fire damages American homes at a better than one-a-minute clip over the course of a year, that's pretty good advice.

Most men live their lives on a plain. A few may accomplish deeds outstanding enough to place them on the hills or mountains among their fellows. Still fewer -- a mere handful a century -- reach Everest heights during their time on earth.

Such a one was Sir Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, whose death at 90 brings to a close one of the longest, richest and most significant lives ever lived by any man.

Churchill's adult life spanned all the way from the battle of Khartoum, which he witnessed (and which to us today seems like something out of medieval history), to the launching of a space probe to Mars.

A soldier and correspondent in his early manhood, Churchill by birth and talent was destined to find his career in government. Yet it was not until 1940, at an age when most men would be thinking of retirement, that his greatest days began.

It was Hitler's boast that he was Germany and Germany was Hitler, but truly, in those dark days of the Battle of Britain, Winston Churchill was Britain -- to the world and to his own people.

It was "Winnie" -- with his always present cigar in one hand, the other making the "V" sign of victory -- scrambling over the rubble of what was once a London building, or following behind troops training in the field, or inspecting the landing beaches in Normandy, or -- at last -- inspecting Hitler's death bunker in Berlin.

Churchill in his long life knew almost every measure of success and fame which any man could reasonably hope for -- as well as the ignominy of military blunders and political exile that would have broken a lesser man.

He received as many honors as any man could reasonably expect from a grateful and admiring world. But if the list of his titles and honors is long, the list of his accomplishments is longer.

Statesman, painter, Noble prize - winning historian, he enriched our lives and language with his memorable speeches. To find his equal in the ability to stir men's souls with words, one must go back at least as far as Lincoln, perhaps to Pericles of Athens 2,300 years ago.

And if men walk this earth 23 centuries hence, and still praise greatness, they will know the name of Winston Churchill.

In keeping with aims to share the Nation's abundance, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Marketing Service recently has begun to buy oleomargarine for distribution to needy families and charitable institutions. Butter has been made available to needy persons for a number of years, but currently USDA has uncommitted stocks to meet needs of these recipients.

The steel industry's salami tactics -- a little price increase at a time -- have resulted in price boosts on about 12 per cent of total steel production since October.

At the same time, the industry finished the year with a new record of output -- close to 127 million tons (117 million tons in 1965 was the old mark). Profit return, while below that of most other industries, was a substantial 17 per cent higher than 1963 for the first half of the year.

Since steel is such a fundamental part of the economy, the immediate question is whether this "creeping selectivity" will be translated into a new bout of not-so-creeping inflation.

Undoubtedly, the Steelworkers, whose contracts run out in May, will be encouraged to make even stronger demands for what they consider their fair share of this particular pie, especially since there were no actual wage increases in the 1963 settlement, and especially in view of the generous increases won by the Auto Workers last year.

But even if the industry can absorb the inevitable labor cost increases, and even if other steel - using industries can absorb the bulk of the price increases, the situation will be one of razor-thin balance.

In addition, the steel industry's short - range gains could be nullified by stepped-up competition from foreign producers, which would be bad news not only for the industry but also for the nation's balance of payments problem.

As steel goes, so go a lot of other things -- all of them of vital interest to all of us.

A TOOT TO THE TOOTERS

Let us not begin the new year without a salute to a group of unsung heroes and heroines who made 1964 more pleasant and exciting for millions of Americans.

We refer to the marching bands and related performers who provided the half-time entertainment at football games.

These bands and their lovely baton twirlers and dancers are terrific. Their skills are amazing. Despite their youth, they play, dance and twirl superbly-- and they do it while executing maneuvers a precision drill team would be proud to equal.

Furthermore, they often do it in weather that would make a seasoned polar bear turn on the electric blanket.

Our sincere thanks to these talented youngsters and their instructors who give so many of us so much pleasure. Football wouldn't be the same without them.

Let's hear it for them, fans!

The New York Public Library houses more than four and a half million books and is prepared to answer almost any question anyone might ask, although some questions are strange. A woman came in to find out how to feed an eel-- her daughter had just brought one home. One elderly, slightly staggering man asked for the date of McKinley's assassination. He had been sent as a committee of one by the "boys" in the saloon where a terrific argument was raging. When he left with the information he turned to the librarian. 'Thank God for the New York Public Library,' he said. 'Guys all over the city would kill each other in arguments if they couldn't come here and get the truth.'

To The Nation, a weekly magazine, I wrote:

In an editorial, with the headline 'It's Delightful, It's Delectable, It's Deductible,' you say: 'A entertains B, presents the bill to his own corporation, which pays and deducts from its income tax. Then B entertains A. Uncle Sam pays it all.'

I say this is untrue. I say Uncle Sam pays 52% of the bill, but not all.

Entertainment may be charged to expense, subject to review by the internal revenue agents. Expense reduces profits. The corporation profit tax is 52%. The corporation must pay 48% of the entertainment bill.

Another mistake is often made by those who say personal gifts to charity and other things are deductible. They imply that the whole gift is paid by Uncle Sam. So-called 'tax free gifts' are deductible from income. If a man is in the 30% income bracket, he pays 70% of the gift, Uncle Sam 30%.

The publisher of The Nation acknowledged and printed my letter. He said my criticism was valid.

LET THE USERS PAY

Back in 1953, the Post Office Department inaugurated a policy of moving first-class mail by air on a space available basis. In other words, if you happen to be lucky, your 5-cent stamp gets you 8-cents worth of carriage. It was argued that an overall economy in mail transporting costs would result.

Now the General Accounting Office, which is the watchdog of federal spending, has reviewed the airlift program for 1960-61. And it has found, and has so reported to Congress, that the Department has incurred unnecessary costs because of the airlift. Specifically, it says, rather than reducing costs by a predicted $212,000 a year, expansion of the program has increased them by more than a million, or by about 85 per cent more than the costs of surface transportation. The GAO also noted that there was airlift service on certain routes on weekends and at certain other times when existing surface transportation could provide the same service at substantial reductions in the Department's transportation costs.

It seems only reasonable that those who want their mail to be airlifted be required to stick on the proper postage. Surface transportation of regular mail --which is primarily provided by the railroads with their huge fleets of mailcars--is efficient, meeting any demand as the almost incredible job done at Christmas time attests year after year. The sole advantage of the airlift is speed and that is only a factor when great distances are involved. And those who find a need for speed should pay for it.

The Red Cross has estimated that more than 16,000 families in these five states suffered major property losses. There are dozens of known dead.

The Christmastime disaster was caused by an unusual combination of weather forces: Heavy rainfall stalled over the area by opposing high pressure systems and warm air which melted mountain snow. The result was the "explosion" of scores of normally small docile streams.

The actual extent of the disaster, by both human and financial measure, cannot be minimized. Great as it was, however, it would have been far worse had it not been for that oldest of man's weapons against this enemy--the dam.

In Oregon, for example, an Army Corps of Engineers spokesman credited the Willamette Basic Flood Control Project with saving Portland from a catastrophe that would have cost more than the price of all the dams in the state.

In California, the flooding that punished the Central Valley in 1955 was not repeated thanks to the Oroville Dam which, though only half completed, absorbed the force of the temperamental Feather and Yuba Rivers.

The survivors of 1964's flood may take some comfort from the fact that eventually all of Northern California will be flood-proofed by dams. Ironically, it will not be the needs of the north but of heavily populated and thirsty Southern California that will be chiefly responsible for this.

Water is simply becoming too precious a resource--not only in the West but all over the country--to be allowed to run off into the sea, let alone to be periodically squandered in devastating and costly floods.

H. L. Hunt Says

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS

One of the most vitally important duties of the President of the United States is appointing good men to fill high and sensitive official posts.

In an age of big government, cabinet secretaries and top administrators in Washington wield enormous power. Obviously the men who hold these offices will play a major part in deciding the future of our country and all who live in it.

The foremost prerequisite for every man being considered for appointment to high federal office should be absolute, unquestioned loyalty to the United States, even in the eyes of his critics.

No pressures, however strong or from whatever source; no bonds of friendship, however deep and sincere; no calls of ambition, however siren-like, should bring about the slightest bending of this high standard. For when it begins to bend, it will soon break; and when it is broken for one high office, it will soon be broken for others.

Good Americans should remember, as they watch Presidential appointments being made, that the Constitutional requirement for confirmation of these appointments by the Senate is no longer a dependable safeguard. Most appointments are approved "automatically" once the President makes them. Only in the rarest cases are they ever challenged.

The checking must be done, and the high standard of loyalty applied before the appointment is made, when the candidates are being considered.

Surely no one can object to giving loyalty to country first place as a requirement in selecting public servants.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON -- Among the Roosevelt intimates, Winston Churchill is best remembered for clomping down the second floor hall of the White House, his slippers flapping, his crimson silk kimono, with gold dragons embroidered on it, half draped around his rotund, naked tummy.

There was no Blair House in those days, and the Prime Minister of England, on his frequent trips to confer with President Roosevelt, was invited to be a White House guest. He kept such unholy hours, sleeping until three in the afternoon and staying up until 3 a.m., that the Joint Chiefs of Staff eventually complained about it.

They pointed out that Winston would wait until after midnight, when they weren't around, to argue FDR into important war decisions. After midnight, the president, following a long, hard day, was weary while Churchill, after sleeping all day, was full of vigor and eloquence.

One of these late night sessions was credited with FDR's original agreement to bow to Winston and transfer Gen. George Marshall to Europe.

At the Ottawa Conference in 1942, Marshall had clashed with Sir Alan Brooke, British Chief of Staff, over his demand for faster British action in the India-Burma theatre. Sir Alan resented this, and later, when Churchill and FDR were alone, Winston adroitly suggested that the allies needed a man of Marshall's stature to command the European theatre, where, incidentally, he would have nothing further to say about the India-Burma apathy.

Reaction in the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and later the public, was so critical that the decision was reversed.

THE CHURCHILL FACTIONS

Among Roosevelt intimates, there were two schools regarding the doughty and crusty Prime Minister, and their opinions about him were just as vigorous as his about them. One school was led by Mrs. Roosebelt, who eventually got so down on Winston that when he would move into the White House she moved up to Hyde Park.

Mrs. Roosevelt's difference with Winston was not over the way he turned her housekeeping topsy-turvy by keeping the servants up all night, but over the independence of India and other British colonies.

U. S. military and diplomatic leaders supported Mrs. Roosevelt, though for somewhat different reasons. Sumner Welles, longtime Under Secretary of State, and Ambassador William Phillips, a former Under Secretary, had argued that if the Indian people were given a pledge of independence they would enter the war with enthusiasm and supply the manpower for the Burma front, thereby saving American lives.

But Churchill said no. And he would pound the table indignantly, insist that no one knew how to handle India except the British, and shout "Blood will flow" if there was American interference.

SEED OF THE EMPIRE

At times the argument among Roosevelt advisers was bitter, especially over Churchill's opposition to the second front across the English Channel. This reached a crisis at Casablanca in 1943, when the U.S. general staff argued that the way to win the war in a hurry was by a direct attack on Germany across the Channel. Churchill was opposed, finally stipulated that if such a second front was undertaken the troop ratio would have to be 70 per cent American to 30 per cent British.

"We cannot squander the seed of the Empire," he said, referring to expected loss of manpower.

However, it would have taken one year to transport enough American troops to England to carry out this ratio, and Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, Chief of War Plans, argued that the British, with a sizable army already in England, could participate on a 50-50 basis. In this case the second front could be started in the summer of 1943.

Churchill was quite irked at Wedemeyer. However, he won his point. The cross-channel operation was delayed for a year and a half, and the long, costly campaign up the Boot of Italy began.

After Casablanca, Churchill suggested that Lord Louis Mountbatten needed an expert liaison officer for his campaign in India, and specifically asked that Gen. Wedemeyer be attached to Mountbatten. Wedemeyer was an expert on German tactics, knew nothing about the Far East, but was transferred to India anyway.

Another hot argument took place among Roosevelt advisers --later among Truman advisers over Greece.

At Casablanca, Churchill got a commitment that the Mediterranean operation be under British jurisdiction, that all American personnel travel on British planes, all telegrams be sent over British wireless, all American labels be scratched off lend-lease goods and replaced with labels reading "Britain Delivers."

American officials resented this bitterly. And the resentment rose to a crescendo when Churchill sent the British army into Athens with telegraphic instructions to Gen. Ronald Scobie--"Treat Athens like a conquered city."

It was the shooting down of Greek women and children by Gen. Scobie on the streets of Athens at the end of the war which led to a communist-inspired civil war and the Truman Doctrine which replaced British rule with an American Protectorate for Greece.

There was great admiration for the old bulldog's indomitable determination to defend the British Empire at all costs in those war days, but there was also a lot of feeling that the war could have been won a little quicker if the old bulldog hadn't been quite so indomitable.

Inside Labor

By VICTOR RIESEL

New Evidence Discloses Chinese Communist Efforts To Infiltrate U. S. Labor

NEW YORK: -- Unnoticed by a forgetful public, a local grand jury has been probing the conspiracy which launched bloody, barricade-building, window smashing, looting, and rioting that turned streets into shambles here last summer.

In recent weeks, at least 18 defiant young self-proclaimed revolutionaries have been quizzed. Most of them are avowed disciples of mainland China's Mao Tse-tung who talk openly of carrying his guerrilla tactics onto the streets of America's cities.

The reluctant witnesses are tough, well trained, direct actionists who lead the upsurging Progressive Labor Movement (PLM) which is quite serious about its revolutionary doctrines. They are obviously well directed. They apparently have a quasi-military central command. They are fully financed. They have no dearth of specialists in guerrilla tactics or of "agit-props", agitation-propagandists.

They find no difficulty in deluging this city and other metropolises, with expensive, deftly written newspapers, magazines and pamphlets championing Peking's Communist line.

They issue regional and neighborhood publications.

But what troubles the federal and local authorities most--and what has brought observers from other cities into this huge community, is the complex of sub-organizations they are able to project into the tense, teeming multi-racial, multi-tongued slum neighborhoods.

These are linked with hard hitting pseudo labor groups which have attempted to provoke chaos on the docks and bitterness among hundreds of thousands of welfare and relief recipients during the strikes here.

His aide is vice chairman Willima Epton, who doubles as head of the PLM's Harlem Branch. Epton was arrested last August 5 on charges of committing criminal anarchy and incitement to commit bodily harm to police officers and local judges.

The third is a mysterious Walter Linder, their publicist, and labor specialist. One of his latest creations is the Railroad Workers Unemployment Council. This was set up in an effort to infiltrate the ranks of those now being laid off by the railroads under a recent Supreme Court decision.

The trio's most recent and most ambitious project was an effort to prolong the national waterfront strike. Last week they devoted much of their eight page, expensively printed tabloid, Challenge, to attacks on leaders of the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) and the federal government. This edition was prepared by one obviously intimate with the most complicated water front matters. No amateur job, this.

Thousands of copies were distributed along the paralyzed Manhattan and Brooklyn docks. All went with precision. Young men appeared, distributed their bundles, spread their papers amongst striking longshoremen and disappeared quickly. Some were chased off, and swiftly made their way to getaway cars as well as public transport.

Few ILA leaders believe the revolutionary literature had any definitive impact. But the bid was obvious. Even if a few militant dockers heeded the incitement, it was worth it to the pro-Peking group. The strike cost the country some $67 million daily.

All this activity requires heavy financing. The Challenge waterfront operation is not the only sortie into such agit-prop work in critical areas.

The revolutionary PLM floats new organizations at will--and then publishes district sections of their magazine Progressive Labor, to help publicize the new front ventures. Typical, in the northern section of this city, is their new Organization of Spanish Speaking Workers.

This is a direct appeal not only to the huge Puerto Rican community here but to the big Cuban population. The PLM is ever hopeful of whipping up a movement for the independence of Puerto Rico.

Amongst the Cubans, PLM seeks to win the youth back to Castro. At least one of those questioned by the grand jury here was the leader of a group of 84 youths who took a well-publicized propaganda trip to Havana recently.

The emergence of a direct-action youth movement devoted to guerrilla tactics on city streets in this community alone would be disturbing. But it is nationally significant because of the PLM leaders' plans to use their experiences in New York as the basis of invasion of scores of other cities with Spanish speaking populations and heavily populated Negro districts.

The plans also prove that the Maoists are not excluding the U.S. from their militant infiltration of big cities across the world. And Maoist infiltration means turbulence. The grand jury here will prove this. The public should take note.

ANN LANDERS
Answers your problems

Dear Ann Landers: A neighbor of mine has hated me ever since last December when I got the last good Christmas tree on the lot. She was right behind me and missed out on the tree by two minutes. This woman is teaching her children to hate my children and I don't know what to do about it.

Saturday I took my youngsters to the matinee. We ran into this woman's children in the lobby. My 11-year-old son said, "Hi" to her son, aged 12. The boy replied, "Shut up, you ugly rat." My son was hurt and puzzled. Finally he turned to me with tears in his eyes and asked, "Why would he answer me like that, mother?"

Is there something I can do to combat this awful thing? -- NO WORDS FOR TELLING

Dear No Words: The best way to "combat this awful thing" is to teach your children to be kind and courteous to everyone although at times it may demand almost superhuman self-control. When the neighbor children behave like savages explain it is because they don't know better and that you hope one day they will learn.

Dear Ann Landers: Please pass the word to all middle-aged men who are tired of their "unexciting wives" and believe a new life awaits them after they get a divorce and marry a younger woman. Don't do it.

My wife became involved with another man. What she really wanted was more attention from me. But I was too busy. Instead of dealing with the problem intelligently, I decided to get even with her by chasing a young girl.

To make a long story short, I chased the young girl until she caught me. I married her and what a horrible mistake that was! She hates keeping house, wants to eat out all the time and whines when she doesn't get her way.

I can't spend my energy (and money) running around every night. I have to work hard to support two families. Her "cute little ways" now make me sick. A man 45 is no match for a young girl -- physically, financially, socially or any other way.

So, who's sorry now? My ex-wife, my three children, the young girl I married and most of all me, because it's all my fault. Again I say, DON'T DO IT. -- BEN THAR

Dear Ben: Your fault? Not 100%. Your wife should not have handed you a divorce so fast. A trial separation would have made much more sense.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 14 years old and in the 10th grade. I wanted to look especially pretty at a party last week so I asked my mother if I could shave my legs. She said, "No." I went ahead and shaved them anyway. Honestly, Ann, I had to do it.

Now, one week later, the hair seems to be growing back awfully fast. I think I will have to shave my legs again very soon if I want to look like a human being instead of a gorilla.

Please tell me if it's true that the oftener a person shaves the faster the hair grows. I'd hate to have to shave my legs every day. Thank you a lot.-- MISS BRISTLES

Dear Miss: Shaving does make hair grow faster but once every other week should be often enough. Between times use a little liquid bleach.

Your druggist will suggest bleaches which are safe and non - irritating. Some people prefer hair - removing creams to shaving. Try it and see which works best for you.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting - And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cincinnati Out Of Race Second Year

Ed Juker's Cincinnati Bearcats, once the scourge of Missouri Valley conference basketball, have dropped out of the championship race for the second year in a row with a losing streak triggered by defeats to Bradley at Cincy.

A year ago a 10-point defeat by Bradley at the Cincy fieldhouse, where the Bearcats are usually invincible, started a five-game losing streak. This season Bradley started it again with an amazing 104-80 romp at Cincinnati Jan. 16. The Cincy lost 82-80 in triple overtime at Louisville.

Drake completed the job by whipping the Bearcats 89-80 at Des Moines Saturday in an afternoon television game. These three games sent Cincy's defensive average up to 70.4 points a game, highest in Jucker's career at Cincy. He wants this figure closer to 55 a game.

The Bearcats now stand 1-4 in the league and 9-6 for all games.

In Cincy's first six years in the league, the Bearcats won or tied for six Valley crowns, took 70 of 78 league games, 161 of 177 over-all and two NCAA crowns.

Fourth-ranked Wichita stayed on top at 5-0 and St. Louis second at 4-1 as the Valley race largely marked time last week because of final exams. The Shockers will have All America Dave Stallworth for only two more games: Loyola at Chicago Stadium Friday and Louisville at Wichita Saturday. They took another jolt last week with the dismissal of two players from the squad.

Nate Bowman, starting 6-10 pivot, and Gerald Davis, his 6-9 stand-in, were shelved for poor attitudes and work both in class and in practice. It's possible they will be back by Friday if they hit the books, but one Wichita official termed this unlikely.

The talented 6-7 Stallworth, with peak performances, could lift the Shockers past the next two games, but their title hopes might be gone after that without Bowman. St. Louis plays Cincy in St. Louis Saturday.

In other games this week, St. Joseph's of Indiana is at Cincy Wednesday, Tulsa at Drake Thursday, and North Texas at Drake and Tulsa at Bradley, both Saturday. The Tulsa-Bradley game will be televised.

Valley teams split two non-conference games Saturday night, Louisville losing 83-78 at Dayton and Tulsa beating Loyola of Los Angeles 70-59 at Tulsa.

Stokes Is On Slow Road To Recovery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Today was a big day for Maurice Stokes, a cheerful and determined young man despite a seven-year illness.

His courageous fight for recovery inched a step forward when the former basketball star was moved across town to another hospital — where he hopes to learn to walk and feed himself again.

Big Mo, now 31, was on his way to becoming one of the great stars in the National Basketball Association when, in March 1958, he was stricken with post-traumatic encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, which has left him paralyzed ever since.

He's determined to get well.

Stokes has spent the last 6½ years in Christ Hospital, most of the time either lying or sitting helplessly in a private room. Today he was moved to Good Samaritan to make use of the $300,000 physical rehabilitation program there.

"He's looking forward to this very much," said Stokes' good friend, Jack Twyman of the Cincinnati Royals.

Twyman said Stokes' over-all progress is good.

"Maurie is doing real fine," Twyman said. "He can talk much better — the most encouraging part of his rehabilitation.

"But he can't walk by himself yet although he can stand. He still cannot feed himself.

"He's got a tremendous attitude," Twyman added. "He's always maintained a competitive spirit and optimism. He's not depressed at all.

"But there's no way of telling at all when he might leave the hospital for good."

Twyman is Stokes' benefactor and legal guardian. He has undertaken a massive job of raising and handling money to make sure Stokes gets the best of treatment.

CINCINNATI (AP) -- Steve Thomas of Xavier, the nation's fifth-leading collegiate basketball scorer, will be out of action tonight when the Musketeers meet Detroit.

Thomas, who is averaging 30.2 points a game, suffered a severe sprain to his right knee in Xavier's 96-90 victory over Duquesne Saturday night.

Wildcats Pump In 104 Points To Down Portageville

BLOOMFIELD-- From out of the midst of a game that had 80 fouls called, the Bloomfield Wildcats came charging through to win over the Portageville Bulldogs 104-59. Bloomfield grabbed off 42 of the 80 fouls, and Portageville committed 38.

Already in trouble due to the fouls, Portageville aggravated their problems even more by having troubles getting up on the boards. In fact they had trouble even getting to shoot. On the offensive board they amassed a total of 6 rebounds and they cleared away 16 on defense for a total of 22 for the night. Their shooting ran into something immovable that being The Wildcats Press, off which Portageville could get only 28 shots.

Bloomfield got 57 rebounds with Mike Wise clearing off 25 of them. Ron White was his usual self, making 25 assisted with some extraordinary moves. The Wildcats managed to steal the ball away from the Bulldogs not less than 40 times. The big offensive play came from Wise with 30 points. Gillispie followed with 16, all of which he collected in the first six minutes of the game. Danny Gaines and Dale Underwood rounded out Bloomfield's double figure men with 12 and 10 respectively.

Bloomfield got the double take by winning the "B" game 35-20 behind the shooting of Bullinger with 11. Phillips paced Portageville with 13.

Bloomfield plays again tonight in the Stoddard County Tournament when they face Bell City at 6:00 following Richland and Woodland (B), who clash at 4:30. At 7:30 Bernie faces Puxico (B) and the last game will be between the Puxico and Richland varsities at 9:00.

Brown Gets Hickok Award

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "This has been a great year — the championship and now this. Honestly, I can't say which means more now. They're both great."

It was Jimmy Brown talking. The great fullback of the champion Cleveland Browns of the National Football League had just been named winner of the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award Sunday and the $10,000 diamond-studded, gold-buckled belt that goes with it.

The championship was Brown's first with the Browns since he came up as an All-America from Syracuse.

"I would rather have the NFL title than any individual rushing championship," said the 28-year-old star who has captured the rushing crown in seven of the eight years he's been with the Browns.

"Winning the Hickok Belt this year truly surprised me," added Brown. "I thought I had a better chance in other years. This year we had so much talent—Frank Ryan, Paul Warfield, Gary Collins, and don't forget Dick Modzelewski."

Brown said he had two years to go on a three-year contract with the Browns.

"Then I'm going to call it a career," said Brown. "Two more years and I hope it will be two more championships. The championship gives you the most satisfaction."

Brown nosed out auto driving ace A.J. Foyt of Houston by seven points in the vote by a national panel of 136 sports writers and sportscasters.

Athlete Award Given To Teacher

Young, who set an American steeplechase record at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, surprised the Marine officer and 18-year-old Lindgren by taking the two-mile run Saturday night.

The 27-year-old Young, of Casa Grande, Ariz., sprinted the final quarter in 58.3 for an easy victory.

Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State set an American women's record of 6.7 in the 60-yard dash. Miss Tyus won the 100 meters at the Olympics.

Ralph Boston of the Southern California Striders sailed 26 feet, 5 inches in the long jump for victory, and Bill Crothers of Canada took the 600-yard run.

Dyrol Burleson of Oregon captured the mile in a slow 4:07.2, unheralded Earl McCullouch won the 60-yard hurdles in 7.2 as Rex Cawley, 400-meter hurdles gold medalist in the Olympics was second, and Jack Yerman of the Santa Clara Youth Village finished first in the 500-yard dash with a 59.0 clocking mile Mike Larrabee, 400-meter winner at Tokyo, was last.

Young, timed in 8:41.2, outdistanced Mills by 25 yards while young Lindgren, who had led most of the way, was third.

POPLAR BLUFF -- The Poplar Bluff Mules came in a kicking to run off with championship honors here Saturday night by downing the third seeded Kennett Indians 62-47. Greenville, seeded number two, took third place by winning over Doniphan 66-58.

Boston Is Off Again To Win

BOSTON (AP) — "It's great to be a winner again," someone shouted in the Celtics' dressing room.

The Boston club, careening toward a record number of victories in a National Basketball Association season, didn't stop to mourn the end of a 16-game winning streak Saturday.

Instead, the seven-time world champions took it out on Los Angeles 117-93 Sunday, administering a stern lesson in the arts of basket making and stopping.

The triumph was the 24th in the last 26 starts for Boston which at 42-8 is eight full games ahead of Eastern Division runner-up Cincinnati with 30 to play.

The Royals beat San Francisco 124-103 Sunday, enabling the Warriors to set a league mark for consecutive losses at 16. The Warriors had previously tied the old mark of 15 set by Denver in 1949.

In the other game played Sunday night, the Baltimore Bullets turned back the St. Louis Hawks 114-106.

The Celts remain on target for 67 victories, seven better than the one-season high they established in 1960.

Coach Red Auerbach discussed the anatomy of a streak on his team after the nationally televised battle was settled by a third-quarter blitz. Boston outscored the Lakers 16-2 in the final minutes of the period it dominated 31-19.

K.C. Jones set up five baskets and scored three. Hobbling Tommy Heinsohn got seven points in the stretch and the Lakers, who had five times rallied to within a single point, were left breathless in the wake.

LONDON (AP) -- Former world lightweight champion Joe Brown of New Orleans, who is scheduled to fight in Cape Town, South Africa, next week, has withdrawn from a scheduled 10-round fight with London's Vic Andreetti Tuesday.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

The Biography of SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL Taken from the 1962 Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Author: Herbert G. Nicholas, Oxford University, England

Sir Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, British statesman, was born on Nov. 30, 1874, at Blenheim palace, Oxfordshire, England. He was the son of Lord Randolph Churchill and Jennie, daughter of Leonard Jerome, of New York City. He was educated at Harrow and Sandhurst. Entering the army in 1895, he saw active war service with the Malakand field force (1897) and the Tirah expeditionary force (1898); attached to the 21st Lancers, he also served with the Nile expeditionary force and was present at the battle of Omdurman (1898). These campaigns gave him material for two brilliant books, The Story of the Malakand Field Force (1898) and The River War (1899). During the South African War (1899-1902) he was correspondent for the Morning Post and wrote an account of his experiences as London to Ladysmith via Pretoria (1900). He was taken prisoner by the Boers, but escaped.

Churchill was elected Conservative M.P. for Oldham in 1900 (having unsuccessfully contested the seat in 1899), and immediately made his mark in a house which expected great things from his father's son. He excelled in the set speech elaborately prepared on the classic models, but was not at first a ready speaker. Lord Balfour once said of him that he carried "heavy but not very mobile guns," and it was only later that he became a master in the cut and thrust of debate. He had a filial reverence for the political memory of his father and his Life of Lord Randolph Churchill (1906) is one of the most interesting political biographies in the language.

In 1904, when Joseph Chamberlain's tariff reform campaign seemed likely to turn the Conservatives into a party of protection, Churchill crossed the floor of the house and joined the Liberals. In the general election of 1906 he was returned for North-West Manchester and became undersecretary for the colonies in the Campbell-Bannerman government, 1905-08. He soon won renown by his skill and authority in defending the policy of conciliation and self-government for South Africa. With his admission to the cabinet in 1908 as president of the board of trade his standing increased. His platform oratory had a vivacity, a boldness and an epigrammatic quality that stirred popular gatherings. Into the conflict that followed the rejection of the Lloyd George budget by the house of lords he threw himself with characteristic impetuosity. As home secretary (1909-11) he was responsible for carrying the Trade Boards act, directed against sweated industries, but was rather less successful in coping with the industrial disturbances of 1911.

Transferred to the admiralty later in the year, Churchill was explicitly enjoined by Herbert Asquith to put the navy into a state of "instant and constant readiness" in case of a German attack. He was not at first successful in creating the naval war staff which was generally thought desirable, but he did introduce many valuable reforms, both administrative and technical. When war came in 1914, it found the navy both efficient and prepared.

Churchill, who had been one of the most convinced supporters of the declaration of war on Germany, was the most strenuous advocate of aggressive land and sea campaigns. He carried out the Dardanelles enterprise of 1915 in face of the disapproval of the first sea lord, Sir John Fisher. Churchill left the admiralty for the duchy of Lancaster when the expedition proved a failure and Fisher resigned. When the Liberal government collapsed in the ensuing political crisis, Churchill abandoned politics for soldiering; he went on active service in France, where he commanded the 6th Royal Scots Fusiliers.

David Lloyd George, returning to power in 1917, recalled Churchill to office, first as minister of munitions and then as combined war and air minister (1918-21). But apart from his conspicuous part in the Irish settlement, Churchill began to be less in agreement with the premier. Lloyd George disapproved of the costly British intervention in the U.S.S.R. that Churchill promoted. To be given the colonial office instead of the exchequer in 1921 was a severe disappointment. In the collapse of the coalition in 1922 Churchill lost even his seat in parliament, after representing Dundee since 1908.

Two years of retirement followed, filled, with characteristic versatility, by painting and writing. In 1924 he was returned to parliament from Epping as a Constitutionalist. Stanley Baldwin appointed him chancellor of the exchequer and in 1925 he rejoined the Conservative party. He presided over the return to the gold standard (1925), with the accompanying "revenue duties" and the derating scheme of 1928, measures not unproductive of controversy either then or since. In the same period he completed his work The World Crisis (1923-29).

With the fall of the Conservative government in 1929 a breach developed between Churchill and Baldwin. It began over India, where Churchill was opposed to any abdication of British imperial power--an opposition which led to his exclusion from the National government of 1931. In the nine years that followed Churchill led the life of a private member of parliament, writing the life of his great ancestor the 1st duke of Marlborough and only intervening in public debate on issues that profoundly moved him. As the Ramsay MacDonald, Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain governments pursued their policies of conciliation and surrender to the threats of Adolf Hitler, Churchill's protests became ever louder and more insistent. From 1936 to 1938 he particularly warned against German rearmament and British unpreparedness. In the commons' debate on the Munich agreement he asserted that is was "a defeat without a war" and "only the beginning of the reckoning." In March 1939 he pressed for an all-party government and in May urged an immediate agreement with the U.S.S.R; to both proposals Chamberlain was cool.

However, on the British declaration of war on Sept. 3, 1939, Chamberlain in response to a wide popular demand appointed Churchill to his old post at the admiralty. His energy was soon felt not only within the department but also in the work of the cabinet. But the Norwegian defeats of April and May 1940 shook public confidence in Chamberlain's leadership, and on May 10, when the German armies entered the Low Countries, Chamberlain resigned to make way for the one leader, Churchill, who could form a national coalition government. Three days later Churchill made his celebrated speech to the commons in which he said, "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat." Parliament gave him a unanimous vote of confidence.

This confidence was sustained throughout the four and one-half years that followed, stimulated by Churchill's rocklike trust in Allied victory and his frank, memorable and dynamic oratory. The story of his war premiership is the history of the British war effort because more nearly than any other war leader in British history he both directed and personified it, combining with the premiership the ministry of defense and taking a tirelessly energetic personal interest in every detail of administration. At moments of crisis he crystallized the national will, as in his memorable declaration on the occasion of Dunkirk, "We shall go on to the end, whatever the cost may be," or in the decision to reinforce the middle east in the dangerous autumn of 1940, or in the pledge to the U.S.S.R. on June 22, 1941, "Any man or state who marches with Hitler is our foe."

To nothing did Churchill more earnestly devote himself than to the construction and maintenance of what he called the "Grand Alliance." From the outset he looked forward to the day when, "The New World, with all its power and might," would step "forth to the rescue and the liberation of the Old." Churchill's conduct of relations with the United States and its wartime president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was a remarkable blend of tact and candour, of a determination, as he said, not to "liquidate" the British empire and yet of a willingness to pool sovereignty and resources in a common cause.

With the U.S.S.R. he strove unceasingly to break down the barriers of misunderstanding--witness his dispatch to Moscow of Lord Beaverbrook in Sept. 1941, and of Anthony Eden in November and his own visit to Joseph Stalin in Aug. 1942. In Dec. 1941 he went to Washington, D. C., for the first of a series of conferences with Roosevelt. The year 1942 saw British reverses in Burma, Malaya and Hong Kong; but as U.S. strength gathered and the Russians fell back on Stalingrad, there was pressure on Churchill to agree to the opening of a second front in Europe. Churchill thought this premature and successfully opposed it.

Even for 1944 he personally advocated an invasion of central Europe from the Mediterranean to coincide with Normandy landings. However, Churchill's loyalty to an agreed strategy was as complete as his advocacy of his own views was powerful. Never in history had allied forces co-operated so harmoniously as in the strategy hammered out at the six planning conferences with Roosevelt and other leaders which Churchill attended in 1943.

The successes of 1944 brought new problems. At home and abroad Churchill was attacked for supporting allegedly reactionary regimes in Belgium, Italy and Greece. Meanwhile, his conversations in Moscow in October revealed the entering wedge of disagreements with the U.S.S.R. about eastern Europe.

The next year brought victory and great popular acclaim for Churchill. But the general election of June showed that this acclaim did not extend to Churchill, the Conservative party leader. Churchill bore the brunt of the election campaign himself, broadcasting and touring the country. But, although he retained his own seat, his party was severely defeated, and he began a long vigil as leader of the opposition.

During the first Labour government after World War II (1945-50) Churchill, still boundlessly energetic in his seventies, did not confine himself to parliamentary activities, master of debate though he still showed himself to be. He also embarked on a full-scale history of World War II (6 vol., 1948-53).

His concern for British security and world peace did not flag. On March 5, 1946, in a speech at Fulton, Mo., he sharply criticized growing Soviet imperialism and advocated a "fraternal association" of the English-speaking peoples. On Sept. 19, 1946, at Zurich, Switz., he urged a closer unity in Europe, following it up with personal support for the Council of Europe, the first assembly of which he attended at Strasbourg, Fr., in 1949.

In the 1950 general election Churchill again led the Conservative party, and the Labour majority was reduced to seven. After his party won the election of Oct. 1951, Churchill again became prime minister. Here his single-minded devotion was to the cause of world peace, and his efforts were continuously bent on the realization of "talks at the summit" with Soviet leaders. However, age obliged his resignation on April 5, 1955, with these hopes unrealized although, by one of history's ironies, his chosen successor, Sir Anthony Eden, was able a few weeks later to announce to a British electorate Soviet and U. S. agreement to a four-power conference at Geneva, Switz.

Winston Churchill was named a knight of the Order of the Garter by Queen Elizabeth II on April 24, 1953.

State Reorganization Commission of Missouri Report for 1965

THE STATE REORGANIZATION COMMISSION
State of Missouri
State Capitol
Jefferson City, Missouri
January 8, 1965

To News Media of Missouri

The State Reorganization Commission, known as "The Little Hoover Commission" is releasing its report to the public of Missouri on January 24, 1965.

This is the second time in the more than one hundred forty years of Missouri history that such a survey of the Missouri executive state government has been made.

Perhaps some thirty per cent or more of the first report of 1955 was actually implemented into law by either legislative or administrative action. Out of one of these recommendations came the present imposition of interest on inactive state funds which has brought into the Treasury of Missouri, without one penny increase in taxes, more than $18,000,000.00.

It is difficult to secure or to retain the attention of the public concerning a governmental report such as this. It is (we hope) devoid of scandal, sadism, salacious material and other elements which to some degree attract millions of readers.

Yet, with the great expansion of government, of population, and of public expenditures, there is little hope for improvement unless we can concentrate on sober, affirmative, progressive movements for governmental reform and economy.

The report of ten years ago was given splendid publicity upon its release; and then relatively speaking dropped almost completely from public attention, except when brought indirectly into the political campaigns of contesting candidates.

With the above in mind, would it be possible for any of the news media to adopt a program (if they believe this report has merit) of presenting the Little Hoover Report over a series of several weeks in installments; with the hope of gaining greater attention by the people of Missouri and their representatives.

This is an objective, but fervent, and we hope, unselfish and altruistic plea for publicity.

Respectfully yours,
Francis Smith
Chairman

Cat in School Wall a Problem For Officials

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Sand Lake elementary school here has a brand new library and multipurpose room with just one fault. There's a cat in the wall.

They got a trap from the State Fish and Game Department and baited it with cat food. In the morning, the goodies were gone, but the cat was still in the wall.

They tried two cans of sardines. Same result.

The whole thing started while Parker and employes of the contractor were inspecting the school addition. The job was finished except for closing in an inspection plate about 18 by 18 inches in size.

"We were just standing there when this big old black cat came running into the room and jumped right smack into the hole," Parker said.

"We can't use the room. We have to keep the door closed or we never will know if he comes out.

"We've seen him. That room has a glass front. Several times we've slipped up there real quite like and there he is —out in the room.

"Then you reach for that door and — wham! back he goes into the wall."

The cat has not been given a name.

"We don't know whether to call him, or it, John or Jane," Parker said.

"If it should be a female — having kittens in there — then we're really in trouble."

Says to Live Long Mine Coal; Take Whiskey Daily

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) -- John Hogue, 100 years old today has a new recipe for a long life: Mine coal.

Hogue did that for 61 years, in Kentucky, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Mining is beneficial, he said, because:

It makes you take a good hot bath at the end of the day.

No one eats much in a coal mine. When miners get home at night they are too tired to do anything but eat a light, simple meal and go straight to bed.

It is good exercise.

Too much food and too little rest are big reasons why most people don't live to be 100, Hogue, formerly of Pineville, Ky., said.

He also said another thing may have helped him keep fit--a daily dose of whisky mixed with quinine and coal tar.

Marketing Research For Consumers

Consumers, as well as farmers, benefit from an efficient food distribution system, concluded the Marketing Research Advisory Committee of the U. S. Department of Agriculture recently.

With this in mind, this committee of national leaders in the field of marketing research recommended at its annual meeting that the Department of Agriculture increase and develop new research in the field of food distribution.

For example, research was suggested on lower-cost systems for handling perishable products en route to retail stores and public eating places. Such improvements would help make food cheaper for the consumer, the committee reasoned, while at the same time help the producer market his product.

Also with consumers in mind, the committee recommended that USDA conduct studies to find out what kinds of products consumers want -- including size, shape, color, flavor, etc. Then, USDA was urged, try to develop these products.

Among other recommendations of special interest to consumers was periodic appraisals of the food stamp, school lunch and other food distribution programs.

For protection of farm products, and resulting improved quality of foods on the market, research also was suggested on better containers, handling procedures and transportation equipment.

A WISH FOR YOU

I made a wish, that each passing day, something nice would come your way.
It's just a little wish you see--
the worthwhile things are all for free.
The wonder of the rising sun--
The hour of peace when day is done.
The way a tree grows straight and tall--
These simple things no doubt can bring -- the treasured thoughts to which we cling.
That's why I wish with each passing day, the good things of life will come your way.

It has been announced that Prof. Bryon Burbage of Princeton's Institute for Advanced Study has completed an extensive research project on the growth of behavior patterns in the human male. (Dr. Burbage will be remembered for his work on Iceberg structure during World War I.) After more than three years of concentrated studies, a summary of his findings has been compiled for the enlightenment of his colleagues and associates.

One of the more interesting discoveries, which has been made public, is the fact that man is born with a keen sense of curiosity that continues to grow with his physical stature. In fact, man's sense of curiosity sometimes reaches such proportions that he is compelled to start reading any article, regardless of how ridiculous it is, and continue to read it to the very end; as you are doing now--April Fool!

THE Outlook for Business

CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY
Peter Kiewit, President
Peter Kiewit Sons, Inc.

I should like to start this morning by telling you that construction is our largest single industry; employs a peak of three million people; uses more than 70 per cent of all lumber production, 75 per cent of window glass production, 25 per cent of steel production, and practically all of the cement production. It is one of the nation's most competitive businesses. This is reflected in the fact that the average net profit construction corporations is 1.6 per cent of gross revenue as compared to a rate of over 5 per cent for all industry, and something over 800,000 contract construction firms are listed by the U. S. Department of Commerce as being engaged in this effort.

I had the honor of appearing on this panel in 1954, at which time I predicted a 5 per cent increase in construction volume, which actually turned out to be more than 10 per cent, and based my prediction on three things: (1) growth in population, (2) growth in per capita income, and (3) confidence in the economic future of our country.

During the last 10 years, population has increased 30 million, or an average of 2 per cent a year. Per capita income has gone up a third, and construction effort has grown from 39 billion to something over 66 billion dollars, or 7 per cent a year.

This growth in construction spending is impressive, but when we take into consideration the inflation in the six years following the Korean War and a more moderate rise in the last four years, for an average yearly increase of 5 per cent, we find that the actual physical gain in construction has been only 2 per cent a year -- which just keeps pace with the population growth during this 10-year period. It does not compensate for the higher per capita income and the resulting higher standard of living. Neither does it keep pace with the 2 per cent obsolescence factor that our Income Tax people recognize when they allow a 50-year life on capital improvements.

These facts prompt me to say that I do not think we are building fast enough to meet our needs and to maintain our place of leadership in the world.

I expect to see the total dollar volume of construction placed in 1965 go up by something less than 4 per cent, which is considerably below the 6.5 per cent currently estimated for 1964. I think construction costs, which have increase 1.5 per cent annually during recent years, may move at a faster tempo next year and that we will probably again have a physical increase of something on the order of 2 per cent, which follows the pattern of the last 10 years.

I look forward to a reduction in space, missile, and military construction. I look forward to a slow - down in construction of office buildings, apartments, and single family dwellings in many locations.

On the plus side, I think there will be more industrial plant construction to satisfy expansion requirements and to meet competitive pricing, both local and foreign. Commercial building will increase because of new suburban area development and modernization of core areas. I look for an increase in construction of highways, urban transportation, hospitals, schools, power facilities, and water use and control projects.

In closing I should like to say, anyone postponing construction in the hope of lower prices will, I think, be disappointed. Also, I should like to again emphasize that I think physical construction volume must increase if we are to continue to improve our over-all economic position and maintain our leadership in world affairs.

No Army, No Navy, No Air Force

By Lyle H. Munson

STAGE II

A. International Disarmament Organization:

The powers and responsibilities of the IDO shall be progressively enlarged in order to give it the capabilities to verify the measures undertaken in Stage II.

B. To Further Reduce Armed Forces and Armaments:

(a) Levels of forces for the U.S., U.S.S.R., and other militarily significant states shall be further reduced by substantial amounts to agreed levels in equitable and balanced steps.

(b) Levels of armaments of prescribed types shall be further reduced by equitable and balanced steps. The reduction shall be accomplished by transfers of armaments to depots supervised by the IDO. When, at specified periods during the Stage II reduction process, the parties have agreed that the armaments and armed forces are at prescribed levels, the armaments in depots shall be destroyed or converted to peaceful uses.

(c) There shall be further agreed restrictions on the production of armaments.

(d) Agreed military bases and facilities wherever they are located shall be dismantled or converted to peaceful uses.

(e) Depending upon the findings of the Experts Commission on CBR weapons, the production of CBR weapons shall be halted, existing stocks progressively reduced, and the resulting excess quantities destroyed or converted to peaceful uses.

C. To Further Reduce the Nuclear Threat:

Stocks of nuclear weapons shall be progressively reduced to the minimum levels which can be agreed upon as a result of the findings of the Nuclear Experts Commission; the resulting excess of fissionable material shall be transferred to peaceful purposes.

D. To Further Reduce Strategic Nuclear Weapons Delivery Vehicles:

Further reductions in the stocks of strategic nuclear weapons delivery vehicles and agreed types of weapons designed to counter such vehicles shall be carried out in accordance with the procedure outlined in Stage I.

E. To Keep the Peace:

During Stage II, states shall develop further the peace-keeping processes of the United Nations, to the end that the United Nations can effectively in Stage III deter or suppress any threat or use of force in violation of the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

(a) States shall agree upon strengthening the structure, authority, and operation of the United Nations so as to assure that the United Nations will be able effectively to protect states against threats to or breaches of the peace.

(b) The U.N. Peace Force shall be established and progressively strengthened.

(c) States shall also agree upon further improvements and developments in rules of international conduct and in processes for peaceful settlement of disputes and differences.

STAGE III

By the time Stage II has been completed, the confidence produced through a verified disarmament program, the acceptance of rules of peaceful international behavior, and the development of strengthened international peace - keeping processes within the framework of the U.N should have reached a point where the states of the world can move forward to Stage III. In Stage III progressive controlled disarmament and continuously developing principles and procedures of international law would proceed to a point where no state would have the military power to challenge the progressively strengthened U. N. Peace Force and all international disputes would be settled according to the agreed principles of international conduct.

The progressive steps to be taken during the final phase of the disarmament program would be directed toward the attainment of a world in which:

(a) States would retain only those forces, non - nuclear armaments, and establishments required for the purpose of maintaining internal order; they would also support and provide agreed manpower for a U.N. Peace Force.

(b) The U.N. Peace Force, equipped with agreed types and quantities of armaments, would be fully functioning.

(c) The manufacture of armaments would be prohibited except for those of agreed types and quantities to be used by the U.N. Peace Force and those required to maintain internal order. All other armaments would be destroyed or converted to peaceful purposes.

(d) The peace-keeping capabilities of the United Nations would be sufficiently strong and the obligations of all states under such arrangements sufficiently far-reaching as to assure peace and the just settlement of differences in a disarmed world.

To the Editor:

No two minds are alike --just like fingerprints. Only from knowledge gained by the study of history -- starting with the greatest historical, and moral-guiding book of all time, --God's Holy Bible--can infinitesimal man be guided, for his own good -- and that of his descendants -- during his butterfly term upon God's earth.

Our learned, God - trusting Founding Fathers -- the only group of politicians in all history, not interested in satanic control of people --were guided by their Bible and studies of history.

To insure against a return to tyrannical bondage-- that they fought the revolutionary war to eliminate under socialist King George III--and ALL bondage and slavery of peoples from the days of Jesus Christ, down to the always, socialist-ridden European countries that the Pilgrims fled from -- they worked out the best man - made laws to insure freedoms -- in all history -- our U. S. Constitution.

Each state was a Republic unto itself, with its own State Legislature and Governor. The Federal government was created by the States -- with limited powers -- mostly for combined defense against foreign enemies, which throughout history had warred against each other --and trade with those were, at least temporarily friendly.

Their wise plans --NO MORE of the ageold, centralized, socialist, Federal tyranny--freedom of each sovereign state and the individuals therein to care for themselves -- unfettered free-enterprise -- a stock of gold, in sufficient percentages to currency and government bonds issued, to guarantee redemption in gold--and to insure against unlimited issue of worthless, fiat paper -- to be used as money in buying votes of people, toward building and perpetuating a one-party socialist hierarchy -- refraining from alliances with foreign countries (except trade) that always, under new, power-hungry rulers war against each other--and later the Monroe Doctrine--to prevent foreign, ruthless rulers from a foothold in South America--from which they could later attack us through our back-door.

Is this hard for any mind to understand? Why have our people forgotten it all in 40 years, and voted for representatives from Presidents down, to destroy it? Why have we paid for a myriad of socialist educators in our schools and colleges, to teach our children--that all of this--which made America the richest country of free men's history--is all wrong--that for the best interest of all people we must return to the socialist-state form of government? With the socialist-state of Russia, before our very eyes, how could we be so blind?

The Pilgrims -- upon their knees thanked God for their food crops. Our Founding Fathers worshiped only their God. Thomas Jefferson said--"Away with trust in man--let us bind him with the chains of our constitution." But -- our people have transferred their trust and worship from God to men--like the Germans worshiped Hitler -- Italians, Mussolini --and the English, socialist labor - leaders after World War II.

All students know, that only God gives to us His life-giving sun, or His life-giving rain-water from His clouds every morning -- and His resurrection of Spring every year--with all of its beauty and warmth that produces life-giving food-crops. Will we resurrect our thankfulness to Him--and fight for Him? We cannot worship two masters. Or--will we continue meek conformity to the socialist demagogues--political, labor-leader, educator, clergy, communist and a host of other socialist to atheist leaders in all segments of our society--who are inciting and dividing us--thereby destroying thankfulness to God, and our beloved America and freedoms.

Today--now--for the second time in American history--all of us MUST "pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our Sacred Honor," to save our freedoms, our country and our proud, star-spangled-banner. Will we suffer the terrific deprivations necessary, to pay off our mammoth national debts --resurrect our U. S. Constitution, gold standard, national solvency, national independence, and national and individual self-respect?

The first step is for parents, grand and great grandparents, to STOP following, voting for and supporting ALL socialist demagogues. They were the ones who were fooled into destruction of our U. S. Constitution -- our gold standard -- unlimited deficit spending with fiat government bonds--creating the greatest national debt-bubble in all history, for their descendants to pay--all with lunatical blindness to the lessons of all history --that all empires and nations become bankrupt and has-beens, from socialism and deficit - spending.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK. -- The world of medicine is an ever changing one so say the top level medical authorities. And to be properly filled in on what causes what to do what to whom, medical officials are forever under going experiments.

Blytheville's 851st Medical Group flight surgeon, Captain James D. Williams, recently spent a week with the alert personnel from the 97th Air Refueling Squadron to get his inside-first hand information or how alert functions affect the different personnel.

During this time he participated in all normal daily functions and activities of the crews. When the crews went to lunch, Captain Williams went to lunch. When the crews exercised, Captain Williams exercised.

Using the method, he said he learned more about the alert crews, and the crew member's different jobs.

Captain Williams said, "It was a very interesting and awarding experience. Although nothing unusual happened I feel that I can better fulfill my duties as a flight surgeon after having lived with the crews for a week."

Captain Williams entered the Air Force in July 1964, and arrived at Blytheville in September of the same year.

A native of Greensboro, GA., he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd J. Williams. He is a graduate of Emory University, Oxford, Ga., where he received his degree in medicine.

Captain and Mrs. Williams, the former Miss Alice Wagnon from Atlana, Ga., presently reside in downtown Blytheville.

Francis L. Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mills of Dexter, has been promoted to first lieutenant in the Air Force at Travis AFB, Calif.

May Investigate Nazi, Minute Man Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Unamerican Activities will consider possible investigations this year into the activities of the American Nazi party and the Minutemen.

When and if such inquiries decided upon, they likely will be started in secret.

The committee, headed by Rep. Edwin E. Willis, D-La., has a longstanding policy against public disclosure of the results of investigations until and if they become the subject of public hearings.

Rep. Ronald Brooks Cameron, D-Calif., made public earlier this week a letter to Willis expressing concern about "the rise of such groups as the American Nazi party and the Minutemen" and urging a committee inquiry to "dramatize these existing evils and help mobilize public opinion against them."

The committee is known to have received other similar requests.

Robert de Pugh of Norborne, Mo., heads the Minutemen.

Things We Take For Granted

After Margaret and Harold left the church time seemed to fly for the happy couple. First they were greeted in Margaret's home by their many friends then there was a lovely dinner for the wedding party. Soon it was time for Margaret to slip back to her room to finish last minute packing and meet Harold. They had invited the members of the wedding party to go out dancing that night in a nearby town but they were all busy and had to get back home. So Margaret and Harold secretly happy to be alone, went on out to eat and go dancing.

They had returned to their motel and were discussing their trip back to Calif., for they planned to leave the next day. Suddenly they heard a loud knock at their door. Harold opened the door and who should be there to visit them at ten o'clock but part of their wedding party and their children. What a festive occasion that was. Their friends knew they were leaving the next day and decided to give the newly weds a real send off. In fact, even though a shivaree was no longer in style this party could almost be called one. Margaret and Harold were delighted because they knew so well the sincere good wishes that this party expened. Friendship is a thing that Margaret a Celebral Palsied girl, always valued and it made her feel good to know they wanted to be with she and her new husband on their last evening.

Average of Nine Dishes a Year Broken By Housewives, Study Finds

More dishes are broken while drying than washing, the Addison, Ill., sink firm found. The highest rate of breakage of dishes is among young mothers while the lowest is among grandmothers, reported Earl Jensen, president of Jensen-Thorsen Corporation which questioned 600 homemakers on dish-washing breakage.

Most often broken are cups and glasses while large dinner plates have the lowest breakage rate. "Large plates and platters are more carefully handled both because they weigh more than other dishes and cost more," observed Jensen. "Cups break more easily because they are more fragile."

In its dish breakage survey, the stainless steel sink firm found that 70 per cent occurred in drying rather than washing. "Actually drying dishes takes more agility with the hands than washing," noted Jensen. "If a dish slips while drying, the fall is longer, too. In washing most homemakers usually have some type of cushioning in the sink and the chances of breakage are diminished.

"Young mothers have the highest rate of breakage, because they are subject to more distractions like youngsters and also do not have as much kitchen experience as older women, who follow a number of precautions to prevent breakage," Jensen continued.

Among tips to avoid dish breakage, Jensen suggests washing dishes in a plastic pan, orderly stacking of dishes in a plastic or rubberized rack, cushioning the partition in a double bowl and drying dishes over the counter rather than while walking to a cabinet.

How do husbands compare with wives on dish breakage? "Actually husbands break less dishes than their wives -- but mainly because they wash far fewer dishes than their wives," Jensen says.

Lightest Mexico

by John Abney

MEXICO CITY -- It has been a great year for the head-shrinking industry and conformation of the discovery that emotionally disturbed people develop more common colds than normal persons was an unexpected triumph.

And it says in this article that a number of researchers suspect repression may be one of the most powerful emotions affecting the onset of colds.

A graphic example of such things was found in some semi-original documents dating back almost to the Bronze Age when ancient Mexicans were plagued by common colds and a doctor name Bascomb Seven Serpents was doing research on the matter.

People could come dragging into his office complaining about nagging headaches and runny noses. When the doctor asked what they had been taking for it they would say things like tea with powered lizard or maybe wearing a necklace of wolf claws day and night but it was pretty clear that nothing helped.

So this ancient document says that one day a fellow named Serpent Feet (no relation) blurted out something unintentional that put Dr. Seven Serpents on the track.

In the presence of reliable witnesses, Serpent Feet said, "When I have a common cold I just put five or six tranquilizers in a cup of hot vodka and drink it down."

The doctor heard this and rushed up to ask, "Does it cure the cold immediately?"

And Serpent Feet answered, "Naw, doc, but with a jolt like that who cares?"

It started the doctor on a new course of thought and resulted in considerable friction between him and the Association of Tribal Medicine Men but a lot of people followed right along.

There are a couple of paragraphs about a lady who took her husband around to Dr. Seven Serpents' office to have him checked and the doctor asked how long he had had the cold.

So the wife said, "Spencer has been laid up about a month now and nothing this witch doctor that lives in the banyan tree by our house gives him does any good."

Then Dr. Seven Serpents asked, "Has Spencer been tense, edgy and unsettled lately?"

And the wife said, "No sir, he is real easy - going and doesn't get riled at anything."

The doctor nodded solemnly and said, "Madam, he is repressing negative emotions like anger, hate, resentment and fear. Since these things have remained unexpressed too long, Spencer came down with a common cold."

So the lady asked, "What happens if he begins expressing all these emotions? Sort of turns loose, say."

And the doctor answered, "Well, the authorities would give him free room and board for a while. However, Spencer will require some lengthy treatment because some people are chronic hurriers with insatiable ambitions and can't stand frustration."

Spencer got drunk that night and sneaked off to a five-day party some friends were holding and when he came back he was cured. Then his wife took him to Dr. Seven Serpents' office but the nurse came out and said she was sorry the doctor couldn't see anybody for a while because he was in bed with a terrible cold.

According to this document Dr. Seven Serpents was run out of town the same night and everything was forgotten until modern medics began herding up thoughts on the same theory.

Spring was in the air as Nat Wartels, a two-handicap golfer, stopped at a sporting-goods store just off New York's Times Square and bought a dozen golf balls.

Adding Convenience in Bath

One of the main reasons for modernizing an old bathroom or adding a new one is to achieve greater convenience for everyone in the home. The added beauty and comfort through new fixture designs and colors are important, but these advantages are lost if the bathroom remains cramped and uncomfortable.

If only one bathroom is available for adults, two lavatories are advisable. A twin installation in the children's bathroom is a good idea, too, not only because it can be used simultaneously by youngsters to wash up before school and bedtime, but also because children take pride in their possessions and so will be helped to develop cleanliness habits.

Where there is room for only one lavatory, it should be generous in size, providing ample bowl room and ledges. Where space allows, the larger the bowls, the more convenient the bathroom even in a twin installation.

While bathroom fixtures have been available in color for decades, new shades introduced recently offer the modernizing homemaker the choice of many elegant tones, including tan shades, such as Spice Mocha, and subtle pinks. The new hues permit more use of yellow, rust, gold and olive for accessories to achieve a decor which can vary from antique to Colonial or modern.

New designs in fixtures add luxury and minimize maintenance. Growing in popularity are the single-control faucets, now available for the bath and shower as well as lavatories. These fittings have a single knob to control water volume and temperature simultaneously, and many are washerless.

Faucets and flushing mechanisms are the only "working parts" in a bathroom. When a new toilet is installed, it's wise to make sure the mechanism is designed to insure against dripping water and lever jiggling.

As the average human height reaches taller dimensions a large size tub for comfortable bathing gains importance. Six-teen-inch sides and a five and a half-foot length will provide bathing room.

Mrs. Bloomfield and Little Abe expect to follow later.

The Remley Hotel Co., has written to John A. Young to have him advise them as to Sikeston as a point to build a modern fire-proof hotel building. It is a fair prospect and Sikeston is the cross roads to everywhere now, and the place where all live wires wish to locate.

PRAYER

For Today From The Upper Room

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: My God, in him will I trust. (Psalm 91:2)

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, in the quietness of these moments of meditation we turn our thoughts to Thee. In the work of our daily life may we ever think of Thee, whose we are and whom we serve. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

AP Finds 91 percent of the House are for Health Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Associated Press has polled 91 per cent of the members of the House of Representatives and found that a majority favor enactment of legislation to provide health care for the aged.

More than half the congressmen questioned or, to put it another way, slightly less than half the full House, either support outright or are inclined to support President Johnson's program.

The proposal calls for hospital and related benefits for elderly Americans administered through the Social Security system and financed through a separate addition to the payroll tax.

Results of the poll, which reached 396 of the 435 House members, strongly suggest that a health-care plan will be enacted this year.

Last year medical care for the aged was approved by the Senate but foundered and died in the House.

Monday, a fresh start begins when the newly reconstituted Ways and Means Committee meets to lay out a schedule for the bill, its No. 1 business, and other matters. Executive sessions may be held later on details of the measure. The target date for House consideration is sometime in March.

Of the 396 House members questioned by Associated Press reporters, 175 said they support the Johnson proposal and 25 that they are inclined to do so. There are 435 members of the House, so 218 is a clear majority.

But the administration appears to have good prospects of picking up additional votes among the 196 members who did not declare themselves at present for the Johnson plan, as well as the 39 who could not be reached.

Only 21 spoke out flatly against any further governmental activity in the field. Twenty-five refused to participate in the poll; 29 said they wanted more time to make up their minds; 6 said they were inclined to vote against the Johnson measure, but not certain to do so.

The biggest group among those not favoring the administration plan included the 115 representatives who said they wanted to see some legislative action in the field other than the administration version.

Republicans have announced they will present an alternative plan. It is expected to involve use of private health insurance.

Spradling to Introduce bill On Collection—

ST. LOUIS (AP) —Legislation to insure that Department of Revenue collections are deposited immediately in the state treasury will be introduced by state Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr., Cape Girardeau, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat reported Saturday.

It was reported this week that motor vehicle and driver license fees collected by 137 revenue department branch offices throughout the state will be put in department bank accounts and then transferred to the state treasurer.

This system was abandoned four years ago in the administration of Gov. John M. Dalton after criticism by the Missouri Public Expenditures Survey and a joint legislative committee on taxes.

It was charged then that such a practice deprived the state of the use or investment of the funds because of a lag in transmitting money from revenue department accounts to the state treasurer.

Sen. Spradling, who was a member of the joint legislative committee that criticized this system, told the newspaper the matter of transmitting funds immediately to the state treasurer should not be left to administrative discretion, but should be spelled out by statute.

Meanwhile, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, State Treasurer M. E. Morris and State Auditor Haskell Holman have sought an opinion by Atty. Gen. Norman Anderson of the legality of the resumed practice of routing motor vehicle and driver license fees through revenue department bank accounts.

Mississippi Navigation to Be Conference Subject Feb. 6

A one-day conference on matters affecting navigation on the Mississippi River and its tributaries will be held in the Zodiac Room of the Chase-Park Plaza Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday, February 6, sponsored jointly by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Coast Guard.

This "Navigation Conference" is a prelude to the Annual Meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association. The morning session will be held from 9:30 a.m. until noon, with Maj. Gen. Ellsworth I. Davis, Division Engineer, Lower Mississippi Valley Division, Vicksburg, Miss., presiding. The afternoon session, from 2:00 until 3:30 p.m., will be conducted by Adm. Albert J. Carpenter, Commanding Officer, Second Coast Guard District, St. Louis.

This open meeting will give barge line operators, shippers, port operators, and other users of inland water transportation an opportunity to express their views to the Federal agencies on improvements in procedures and facilities they consider should be undertaken to make barge navigation better and safer on the waterways within the Lower Mississippi Valley Division from St. Louis to the Gulf of Mexico.

The agenda for the meeting includes talks on problems and recommendations from the standpoint of common carrier, contract carrier, and private carrier operations on the Mississippi River. Speaking for the common carriers on the program will be Jack D. Wofford, Vice-President of Operations, American Commercial Barge Line, Jeffersonville, Ind.; for the contract carriers, G. H. Chapman, Vice-President, Upper Mississippi Towing Corporation, Minneapolis, Minn.; and for the private carriers, M. R. Spellacy, Manager, Marine Division, Inland Waterways Department, Humble Oil and Refining Company, Houston, Texas.

Following these presentations, the meeting will be open for statements and discussion from the floor.

In addition to General Davis, Corps of Engineers representatives who will be in attendance to consider matters presented at the meeting include J. Ira Boswell, Chief, Construction-Operations Division, and J. R. Griffith, Chief, Operations Branch, both of LMVD, as well as civilian engineers familiar with navigation conditions from each of the Engineer District offices at St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg, and New Orleans. Other Division Engineers expected to attend are Maj. Gen. George H. Walker, Missouri River Division, Omaha, Nebr.; Brig. Gen. Roy T. Dodge, North Central Division, Chicago; and Brig. Gen. Walter P. Leber, Ohio River Division, Cincinnati.

The afternoon session will include discussions on the legal aspects of damages to aids to navigation, forthcoming changes in types of navigation aids on the Mississippi River system, and a summary of Coast Guard operations affecting aids to navigation for the preceding navigation season.

Persons interested in navigation matters pertaining to the Mississippi River system are cordially invited to attend this conference.

Planning to Sew Edging?

Polly

DEAR POLLY—When sewing lace edging on any garment, it is quite difficult to gather the lace into even and regular ruffles. Look at the top edge of the lace where there are a number of threads that run horizontally. With a needle, pull gently at these threads until you find one that is free and loose. Slowly pull this thread and it will gather the entire length of lace. It is easier to baste this gathered ruffle to the hem or skirt.—MARGARET

GIRLS—This letter was a reminder to me, for my mother always gathered lace this way. I had almost forgotten and it is so easy.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Tack a rubber stair tread to the seat of your child's outdoor swing. This tread protects the youngsters from splinters, shields the board seat from rain and will help prevent the children from accidentally sliding off and hurting themselves.—F. L.

DEAR POLLY—If you do much sewing on your machine, quite a bit of thread can be saved when sewing on small pieces. Don't pull the thread and cut it every time you come to the end of the cloth. Put another piece of cloth close to the one just sewn and continue on to another and another. Pull and clip the thread only when all the small pieces are finished. —THELMA

DEAR POLLY—Wrap a strip of velvet along the length of a towel rack and screw the rack to the back of a closet door for use as a "ribbon bar." Even the most slippery of ribbons or scarves will not fall off the velvet and they do not get tangled.—MARCIA

DEAR POLLY—My kitchen window is very near the stove so I contrived curtain covers to keep the curtains from getting splattered with grease. I have cafe curtains so this hint is for windows that have a rod midway up the window. Take a terry cloth dish or bath towel and hang over the curtains. Use plastic clothespins to clip to the rod. If curtains are very wide, two towels may be necessary as they are hung lengthwise. It takes only a second to put them on and I can fry chicken with a free mind and no worries over spotted curtains.—ANGELA

United Nations Faces Most Serious Threats

BY BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) The United Nations, reconvening shortly in New York, stands at one of the most difficult crossroads in its 20-year lifetime.

It has just had its first ominous withdrawal, Indonesia, the world's fifth most populous country.

Its dues-paying crisis, precipitated by the Soviet Union's refusal to get money up for peacekeeping operations it dislikes, has compelled—at least temporarily—a system of informal voting which disrupts orderly procedures in the 11-nation Security Council.

In the December debates over U.S.-Belgian air rescues of hostages in the Congo, the racist mood so afflicted some African radicals that a few were heard to remark the "inadvisability" of one African leader having two white consultants constantly at his elbow.

Corridor comment of this kind, often considerably more biting than even the sharpest of the radicals' formal utterances in the debate, has led some observers to argue that the general atmosphere at the United Nations is deteriorating in a welter of emotionalism.

ONE U. S. OFFICIAL SUGGESTS that an extension of this mood over a period of several years, a not inconceivable prospect in light of the growing numerical prominence of the Afro-Asian countries, could have a "serious impact" on the conduct of U.N. affairs.

Another American diplomatic source describes the militant Africans particularly as a "quite irrational force" in U.N. councils.

Yet, despite the extremely turbulent air that is now jostling the United Nations, American officials are insistently hopeful that the now greatly swollen agency will keep its balance and will, in fact, resort to a number of strengthening mechanisms. We shall consider these in another column.

Notwithstanding this dogged confidence in the U.N.'s future, specialists in the international field can enumerate very real and fundamental perils:

1. THE SEVERE CRIMP that could be put in the agency's vital peacekeeping function if some durable, trustworthy system of financing is not agreed upon by the major powers.

2. THE NOTABLE MALAPPORTIONMENT between strength of numbers in the General Assembly (with consequent influence on recommendations), and responsibility for peacekeeping, general financing, and other U.N. matters.

3. THE PROSPECT THAT MANY of the U.N.'s still-rising numbers, awash in the emotionalism that gave spur to their new-found independence, could combine steadily to throw the Assembly's weight behind purely "symbolic" declarations almost totally unproductive of real "working gains" in the world's welfare.

4. THE CHANCE, only a faint threat today, that any redressing of the power-responsibility balance in the United Nations might gravely disaffect many in the Afro-Asian group and cause them to seek their own counsel. Irresponsible Indonesia's withdrawal has, unhappily, broken the ice.

Bill Lewis
Washington, D. C.

Mr. Charlie;

I'm writing from Wash., D. C. where I have just attended most of the inaugural activities. I was also able to attend several of the pre - inaugural parties through the efforts of our representatives from Missouri.

Through Sen. Stuart Symington I went to the big reception given by Mr. Auggie Busch of St. Louis for the Mo. Citizens for Johnson and Humphrey. I know you would have enjoyed this one because Eva Gabor was there among many other dignitaries and celeberities.

Our own 10th Dist. Rep. Paul Jones was particularly helpful and saw to it that all of us were able to attend the swearing in ceremonies and also had a buffet luncheon before the parade.

Our fine new Gov. from Mo. Warren Hearnes and his lovely wife also represented us up here and looked very impressive in the parade and at the ball where they were just as friendly and sincere as they are down at home.

It's gratifying to know that our elected officials, whom we sometimes think of as rather distant, actually take a personal interest in all of us.

I'm not as worried about the countries economy, I know I saw enough minks and limousines last night to pay off the national debt twice.

I suppose you can tell I'm quite impressed by it all, but I honestly believe anyone who comes up here will go away feeling a little better about our leaders and the future of our country.

Sincerely,
Bill Lewis

New Spanish Course Offers Money-Back Guarantee

Yes, your money will be promptly refunded, if you are not making steady progress toward learning Spanish within ten days after you begin the course. Mr. William Archer, the author of Spanish SPEED SPEECH, feels that anyone who is not beginning to think and speak with some proficiency in Spanish at the end of ten days should not be penalized a penny. He knows that the course has worked for thousands of people, and he, along with The Daily Sikeston Standard, can confidently make this money-back offer to you, today.

William Archer was always a diligent student of Spanish, however, when he and his family moved to Mexico, he found that he could not converse with the natives. This complete inability to communicate properly was the inspiration for the creation of Spanish SPEED SPEECH. This remarkable course enables you to consolidate thousands of regular and irregular verb endings into twelve "MAGIC KEYS." That's right! The SPEECH SPEECH "MAGIC KEYS" let you express thousands of thoughts and ideas in Spanish with only twelve sounds and endings.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Sikeston Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the textbook at considerable savings by following these simple instructions: Send the easy order blank, which will appear in The Daily Sikeston Standard several times each week. Mail the order blank and a check or money order for $3.04 payable to The Daily Sikeston Standard.

Honor Among Thieves:

That Sadistic, Scary, Gorgeous Blonde

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's easy to find Honor Blackman in a haystack, especially when she is wearing mauve suede slacks, a lavender silk shirt with a neckline that doesn't stay put and is busily using judo to toss James Bond on his ear, and vice versa.

Joan Crosby

On her first trip to the United States she settled in a 50th floor aerie in a hotel where the switchboard operator insisted she was "Honorable Blackman." She peeked out the window, looked at the fog which shrouded the city's spires, and said, "It's just like home."

Home (London) is the place where Honor is known as the girl who has proved sadism can be fun; a judo chop, sheer joy.

Before she tackled James Bond, she was the queen of British television as Cathy Gale, an 007ette, in the popular series The Avengers. The difference between the two characters is basic, Honor says.

"Cathy was not allowed to be sexy. We had all sorts of dramas after the show went on the air. The press said Cathy was a great, stalking deviate dressed in black leather and boots. So I went to the producer and said, 'I must have a lover' and he said 'That's your problem' and I said he misunderstood and we had a great long fight.

"I finally was allowed to fall in love, but I was told 'mustn't touch.' It was all very implicit, rather than explicit.

"But," Honor said, stretching her legs, clad in gray flannel slacks, "one night as I was bashing around on the mat taking my judo instruction, I asked my instructor what he thought about Cathy having a lover. He analyzed it perfectly. He said men watching the show didn't want to see Cathy being mauled by anyone else."

As a result of her role in The Avengers, Honor has an orange belt in judo. "I also have gold on the brain," she said, "so I shall only go after a black belt for money, not love. For two years I had black and blue marks all over me, and purple shoulders. I hated to wear a dress because of the great mass of bruises on my legs."

The casting of Honor in "Goldfinger" was a direct result of her role in The Avengers. Prior to that breakthrough, she had spent 15 years playing roles she describes as "English rose." "For The Avengers, they were looking for someone with a lot of acting experience. They should have given me a medical, that's what I needed."

After the rugged going in The Avengers, when Honor performed all her own stunts, she found her judo match with Sean Connery in "Goldfinger" the ultimate in luxury.

"As a matter of fact, they provided me with a double for the scene where I fly through the air and land in the hay, but I preferred to do it myself. They gave me a mattress under the hay to land on. I never had it so good."

Honor, who is married to actor Maurice Kaufman, says her experience in The Avengers has helped her. She learned to control her temper, and she was able to get rid of "my great streak of violence" and get paid for it.

"God knows what will happen now that I am through being violent. But it really helps you control yourself when you know you can chuck someone out the window if you want to."

IT'S UP TO YOU

A GOOD JOB REFUSED

This is a story of a woodworking plant that could not hire men at good wages right in the heart of the poverty area of Kentucky where there is so much unemployment. The company buys large quantities of hickory billets, and last year it sent three men into Eastern Kentucky to locate standing hickory and to hire men to split up the billets. An abundance of hickory timber was located, but labor to do the work was not available. Not one single billet was produced and all the money spent cruising to find timber and to hire men was wasted.

It is strange indeed that with all the unemployment and poverty in that area no men could be found to do work that is not disagreeable and at good wages. I say the work is not disagreeable because I used to do it myself when I was a boy. Working in timber is rather pleasant and 6 1/2¢ for a 16 inch hickory billet can certainly be considered satisfactory wages. The company offered to finance the operation, but even so, workers could not be found.

Presumably, it is more attractive to sit and wait for the governor's big Anti - Poverty Campaign to move in than to do hard work in the timber getting out hickory billets. If our government teaches the people that they can live without work, it will be a sad day for our formerly free and wonderful country.

A dispatch from Bonn, Germany, states that automation is displacing about 1.5 million West German workers per year. Nevertheless, there are 6 jobs waiting for every man who files a job application in the West German Republic. Obviously, automation is creating jobs. Furthermore, 1 million foreign workers are now employed in Germany and more are being sought.

In brief, the reasons for this phenomenon are a balanced budget, sound money, no inflation and a wage price level that enables German businessmen to compete successfully for their own markets and markets of the world.

Another very important factor is the practice of permitting beginners to become apprentices at low wages. As these boys acquire skill and experience, their wages rise to the standard level, but meanwhile, unemployment is not forced upon them because they are unable to give value received at standard wage rates. A little realized fact in our country is that minimum wages for people with insufficient skill to earn them results in unemployment. That plus the fact that large numbers of persons in our country plan to work only a part of the time and draw unemployment relief the remainder, is the cause for the high ratio of unemployed in the teenage group.

The Bonn Republic seems to have solved the problems of automation and unemployment among teenagers by the application of sound common sense. Is there any reason why our country should not profit by this example?

Robert Taft Jr., tells the GOP to think more and talk less. Very good advice for all of us.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL IS DEAD

Tax Cuts Part of His Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sends to Congress today the cost estimate for launching his "Great Society" — a fiscal 1966 budget approaching $100 billion.

It calls for repeal and reduction of excise taxes which administration sources have estimated at around $1.5 billion, to stimulate the economy and rid business of troublesome and inequitable "nuisance" levies.

The revenue loss will contribute to another year of red-ink federal financing, but officials have predicted that the deficit for the year starting next July 1 will be somewhat smaller than this year's.

The President is known to have carved about $10 billion from agency requests submitted last fall. Government sources foresee a spending total midway between $99 billion and $100 billion.

This cost-cutting achievement was even more remarkable than last year's actual reversal of the upward trend of federal spending, in the opinion of budget experts, because the President was in a two-way squeeze.

Room had to be found for the education, antipoverty, urban, and resource development programs he has promised as elements of the "Great Society" program. At the same time, the inescapable "built-in" cost increases of laws already on the books could themselves have shoved the budget over $100 billion.

Across-the-board cost-cutting pressure has been applied, and low-priority programs have been scaled down to make room for the new high-priority proposals.

The Pentagon, it has been reported, will reduce its spending slightly to about $49 billion. The original Defense Department budget for this year was $51.2 billion, but Secretary Robert S. McNamara has whittled about $1 billion from it.

As Johnson prepared to send his budget to Congress, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., called for an end to federal deficits.

By July 1, he said, the federal government "will have operated in the red for 30 of 36 years." He predicted that the national debt, now $318 billion, "will go higher."

Byrd, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, criticized the system under which the budget is divided into a dozen or more separate bills, many of which permit spending over several years.

"Congress does not know whether it is authorizing deficit, balancing the budget, or developing a surplus," Byrd's statement said.

He proposed that all spending authority be placed in a single package and then limited by the estimates of federal income or revenue during that same period.

The stretch from Sikeston to New Madrid, a distance of 21 miles, is now under construction, and should be completed within a year, leaving two more sections to be completed, which according to District Engineer W. D. Carney, would follow soon after. They are from New Madrid to south of Portageville for 14 miles, and from Portageville to south of Hayti for 26 miles, which should complete the southern section to Memphis.

The northern stretch from St. Louis to Festus is under construction, but the 75-mile stretch from Festus south is still in the blueprint stage.

VA Plans To Cut Spending by More Than 700 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration plans to cut its spending of appropriated funds by more than $700 million in the year starting July 1.

But President Johnson's budget, sent to Congress today, says due to anticipated receipts of more than $1 billion from mortgage sales, "veterans benefits and services under the basic, continuing compensation, pension, and medical care programs will be at record levels in (fiscal year) 1966.

The budget lists expenditures at $4,649,000,000, compared with $5,376,000,000 this year.

More than $100 million will go to cover the cost of increased pension rates and to establish new nursing home programs, under legislation approved in Congress last year.

The budget includes a request for $97,006,000 to finance construction during 1965-66 and subsequent years, until the projects are completed, of replacement and relocated hospitals.

The major items include:

Three Injured In Wreck

Three persons of the Sikeston area were injured in a collision Sunday at 9 p.m., at the interesection of East Malone and Selma street.

Taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital by ambulance were Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Cooper, 115 Marion st., the former receiving lacerations of the head and left thumb, and injuries to his chest and right side. His wife received possible concussion. Allen Raidt, 13, Route 3, Sikeston, occupant of the second car driven by his brother Carl Raidt Jr., 16, received injuries to his right leg at the knee, head lacerations and possible concussion.

Two other occupants in the car, John Raidt and David Byrd, were treated by a physician and released.

According to witnesses at the scene, E. R. Schrader and J. D. Baker, Mr. Cooper was driving east on Malone when a car driven by Carl B. Raidt, Jr., made a left turn from Selma street onto East Malone and struck the Cooper car. Mr. Schrader said the Cooper car was on the inside lane and going east, and a truck was ahead of him in the outside lane. The truck attempted to make a right turn on Selma, when the Raidt car pulled out from Selma street and struck the Cooper car.

Mr. Cooper is a carpenter for the Clinton Construction Company, and the youths in the other car are high school students. Both cars received heavy damage in the impact.

President Plans To Be At Funeral If He Is Able to

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill lay at rest today while the world awaited the somber magnificence of a state funeral he planned for himself.

Monarchs, presidents and veteran statesmen will follow his coffin on its last journey Saturday. President Johnson said he would be among them if sufficiently recovered from the cold that sent him to the hospital over the weekend.

Churchill died shortly after 8 a.m. — 3 a.m., EST — Sunday at No. 28 Hyde Park Gate, the London house in which he had lived since retiring from the premiership in 1955. Two months past his 90th birthday, he had suffered a stroke nine days before. Medical experts said he died peacefully and without pain.

As the world's tributes flowed in for the greatest Englishman of modern times, friends revealed that he first started planning his funeral ceremony during World War II.

In December 1943, he was in Cairo after talks with President Roosevelt and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and caught a cold which turned to pneumonia.

Half jokingly he told aides: "They'll have to give me a state funeral. President Roosevelt will have to come to London to attend it."

From this remark grew Churchill's "funeral book," laying down the procedure he wanted followed and even detailing the names of military units which should attend.

In 1954 he returned to the exercise. Some details inevitably were changed but the outline remained, including a funeral progress up the Thames River of the kind accorded in 1805 to Admiral Lord Nelson, hero of Britain's naval victories over the French.

Determined that everything should go without a hitch, he toured the route the cortege will take. The route is a study in stone of Churchill's life.

From the house where he spent his last years in London, the coffin will go on Wednesday to Westminster Hall, the ancient seat of England's freedoms, adjoining the House of Commons which was his stage.

There it will lie in state for three days. Then through Whitehall, the seat of government, and past his old residence as prime minister, at No. 10 Downing Street.

On down the Strand, with memories here of Churchillian nights out at the Savoy Grill and the now vanished Romano's, favorite haunt of Edwardian London.

Then into Fleet Street, London's newspaper row to which Churchill turned for a platform and for income in his youth and again in the years of political eclipse after World War I.

Finally to St. Paul's, Sir Christopher Wren's domed masterpiece where Britain traditionally takes leave of its heroes.

From St. Paul's the cortege will travel to the Thames. In the shadow of the tower Churchill's coffin will be put aboard a barge to travel up river to a pier near Waterloo Station.

Here the public ceremonial ends. The family will join the coffin on a private train and Churchill will be buried near his parents in a village churchyard in the heart of England.

Parliament was called together this afternoon to hear political leaders' tributes to Churchill and give formal approval to Queen Elizabeth's request that the funeral be made a state occasion.

This approval is automatic. It is technically necessary since the funeral will involve some governmental expense.

The end was announced in a terse bulletin signed by his physician and lifelong friend, Lord Moran. At his bedside were Lady Churchill, his son, and his two daughters.

The queen, among the first to be informed of his death, immediately sent Lady Churchill this message:

"The news of Sir Winston's death cause inexpressible grief to me and my husband. We send our deepest sympathy to you and your family.

"The whole world is the poorer by the loss of his many-sided genius, while the survival of this country and the sister nations of the Commonwealth in the face of the greatest danger that has ever threatened them will be a perpetual memorial to his leadership, his vision, and his indomitable courage."

The funeral is expected to bring together the largest concourse of statesmen since that of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

Diplomats said President Charles de Gaulle has unofficially let it be known that he expects to come. They said the Soviet representative is likely to be President Anastas Mikoyan, whom Churchill knew well, or the new premier, Alexei N. Kosygin.

It will be the first state funeral for a British commoner since that of Prime Minister William E. Gladstone 67 years ago. The service will be conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England.

Burial will be in the small country churchyard in Bladon, 70 miles northwest of London. It is on the great Blenheim estate, home of the dukes of Marlborough, where Churchill was born. His father, Lord Randolph Churchill, was a son of the seventh duke, and Sir Winston died on the 71st anniversary of Lord Randolph's death.

Recommends 500 Million Cut for Agriculture

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson recommended a $500 million cutback in government spending on agriculture today, with most of the decrease to come in price support programs.

The President asked Congress to appropriate $6,357,420,000 to the Department of Agriculture in the forthcoming fiscal year, $500 million less than estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year.

The President recommended price support programs be set at $1.68 billion next year in contrast with this year's estimated $2.29 billion.

Johnson made it clear that his policies will be in the direction of helping persons not needed in agriculture to shift to other ways of making a living.

Most other activities were budgeted at or near present spending levels. This includes $1.73 billion for the food for peace program which, in the overall budget, is included as a foreign aid expenditure; $733 million for the agricultural marketing service which includes such programs as food stamps and school lunches; and $618 million for the agricultural stabilization and conservation service.

The prospective $430 million reduction in price support expenditures is based on the fact that supports for some crops — cotton, feed grains and rice — to be grown this crop year have been reduced.

Johnson said he will ask that present stabilization programs for cotton, feed grains and wheat be extended, with "improvements" to be recommended later.

There are now about 3.2 million farms in this country.

Johnson said he had directed Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman to come up with proposals by which the government could help the rural poor find new opportunities.

The President recommended additional funds to establish small offices of the department's Rural Community Development Service in 20 additional states. These offices would become the focal point of programs to develop non-farm employment opportunities in rural areas.

Johnson again asked that the $225 million agricultural conservation subsidy program be reduced to $120 million for the 1966 crop year. Payments go to farmers to help finance soil and water conservation practices. Last Year, Congress refused to cut the program.

Malcolm Says Electronic Machines To Speed Mail

Postmaster Pleas Malcolm said today he has received word from Postmaster General John A. Gronouski in Washington, D. C. that a big "break-through" has now been made on electronic machines to "read" ZIP-coded addresses on mail.

The Postmaster General said he expects to begin installing these sophisticated new machines in major post offices starting in about a year, Postmaster Malcolm said.

These new machines will be able to sort, as well as read, at the rate of 35,000 letters an hour, or about the same as 20 men could sort in the same length of time.

The offices to get the address readers have not been announced, but the local postmaster said they will have a significant effect on the mail in and out of each community regardless of whether it gets the new machines.

This is because they will speed incoming mail to smaller offices from major cities and step up the dispatch of mail deposited in smaller communities but which must be processed enroute at major mail massing points.

The postmaster emphasized, however, introduction of the "seeing eye" device next year does not mean ZIP Code isn't useful already.

"ZIP CODE", he explained, "is important in mail handling under the system of mail processing already in use which will continue to be in use as the basic system at most points. These machines will be just another step -- in conjunction with the mechanical mail sorting machines we have developed -- to help keep pace with the growing volumes of mail. Neither will the machines endanger jobs -- they will only help us meet mail expansion with minimum manpower expansion."

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL IS DEAD

Tax Cuts Part of His Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sends to Congress today the cost estimate for launching his "Great Society" — a fiscal 1966 budget approaching $100 billion.

It calls for repeal and reduction of excise taxes which administration sources have estimated at around $1.5 billion, to stimulate the economy and rid business of troublesome and inequitable "nuisance" levies.

The revenue loss will contribute to another year of red-ink federal financing, but officials have predicted that the deficit for the year starting next July 1 will be somewhat smaller than this year's.

The President is known to have carved about $10 billion from agency requests submitted last fall. Government sources foresee a spending total midway between $99 billion and $100 billion.

This cost-cutting achievement was even more remarkable than last year's actual reversal of the upward trend of federal spending, in the opinion of budget experts, because the President was in a two-way squeeze.

Room had to be found for the education, antipoverty, urban, and resource development programs he has promised as elements of the "Great Society" program. At the same time, the inescapable "built-in" cost increases of laws already on the books could themselves have shoved the budget over $100 billion.

Across-the-board cost-cutting pressure has been applied, and low-priority programs have been scaled down to make room for the new high-priority proposals.

The Pentagon, it has been reported, will reduce its spending slightly to about $49 billion. The original Defense Department budget for this year was $51.2 billion, but Secretary Robert S. McNamara has whittled about $1 billion from it.

As Johnson prepared to send his budget to Congress, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., called for an end to federal deficits.

By July 1, he said, the federal government "will have operated in the red for 30 of 36 years." He predicted that the national debt, now $318 billion, "will go higher."

Byrd, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, criticized the system under which the budget is divided into a dozen or more separate bills, many of which permit spending over several years.

"Congress does not know whether it is authorizing deficit, balancing the budget, or developing a surplus," Byrd's statement said.

He proposed that all spending authority be placed in a single package and then limited by the estimates of federal income or revenue during that same period.

YMCA WEEK

Next to the cross and the crescent, the YMCA's Red Triangle is the world's most widely known religious symbol. And this splendid organization will be given thoroughly earned recognition during YMCA Week, January 24-31.

The "Y" was organized 121 years ago in London for the purpose of "the improvement of the spiritual and mental condition of young men engaged in houses of business." Shortly after its transplantation to America in 1851, it broadened its aims to include improving minds, bodies, spirits and the social outlook of youth on all levels.

Among its most notable achievements has been 75 years of work in two major fields of current interest -- the teen-ager and our relations with other peoples of the world. The largest single teen-ager program in North America today- the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y program of the "Y" -- has over 350,000 boy and girl members in more than 12,000 clubs. With "service" being the major aim, the clubs have as their purpose "to create, maintain and extend throughout school and community high standards of Christian character." And abroad the "Y" is at work in 83 countries and territories. Significantly, the World Alliance of YMCA's is today headed by an African, Dr. Charles Sherman of Liberia.

The "Y" has earned your salute -- not only during the Week honoring it but every week.

If fire destroyed your home today you might be in for an even ruder shock than you think.

Because the chances are better than even that your insurance coverage is insufficient to replace either your home or your personal possessions.

If your home is more than three years old, in fact, it is almost certainly underinsured if you haven't updated your home insurance coverage since you moved in.

The rise in home construction costs and personal property values in recent years has caused more than half of all insured homes in the United States to be underinsured.

Figures computed reveal that on a national average the value of personal property items, from electric can openers to color TV sets, has jumped by 31 per cent in the last 10 years.

Home construction costs have risen by 19 per cent in the same period, the company said.

In a fairly typical situation, it would cost a homeowner a tidy $4,400 of his own money today to replace a home and possessions that were fully insured 10 years ago.

That figure is based on statistical averages showing that it would cost $17,850 now to build a home that cost $15,000 to build 10 years ago, and that the family with personal property valued at $5,000 then would have $6,550 worth of such goods now.

The latter increase is attributable not only to the rise in prices of personal property items over the years, but also to the rise in their quantity and quality as a result of the general improvement in American living standards.

The statistics become progressively more dramatic the further back you take them. Home construction costs have risen by an average 103 per cent since 1945, for example, and personal property values are up a whopping 155 per cent.

To guard against possible loss from underinsurance, periodic reviews of homeowners policies or fire coverages are recommended.

Additionally, an up-to-date inventory of personal property and its estimated values should be kept in your office or safe deposit box or elsewhere away from the home to guide you in reporting losses to your insurance company in the event of fire or other misfortune.

In view of the fact that fire damages American homes at a better than one-a-minute clip over the course of a year, that's pretty good advice.

Most men live their lives on a plain. A few may accomplish deeds outstanding enough to place them on the hills or mountains among their fellows. Still fewer -- a mere handful a century -- reach Everest heights during their time on earth.

Such a one was Sir Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, whose death at 90 brings to a close one of the longest, richest and most significant lives ever lived by any man.

Churchill's adult life spanned all the way from the battle of Khartoum, which he witnessed (and which to us today seems like something out of medieval history), to the launching of a space probe to Mars.

A soldier and correspondent in his early manhood, Churchill by birth and talent was destined to find his career in government. Yet it was not until 1940, at an age when most men would be thinking of retirement, that his greatest days began.

It was Hitler's boast that he was Germany and Germany was Hitler, but truly, in those dark days of the Battle of Britain, Winston Churchill was Britain -- to the world and to his own people.

It was "Winnie" -- with his always present cigar in one hand, the other making the "V" sign of victory -- scrambling over the rubble of what was once a London building, or following behind troops training in the field, or inspecting the landing beaches in Normandy, or -- at last -- inspecting Hitler's death bunker in Berlin.

Churchill in his long life knew almost every measure of success and fame which any man could reasonably hope for -- as well as the ignominy of military blunders and political exile that would have broken a lesser man.

He received as many honors as any man could reasonably expect from a grateful and admiring world. But if the list of his titles and honors is long, the list of his accomplishments is longer.

Statesman, painter, Noble prize - winning historian, he enriched our lives and language with his memorable speeches. To find his equal in the ability to stir men's souls with words, one must go back at least as far as Lincoln, perhaps to Pericles of Athens 2,300 years ago.

And if men walk this earth 23 centuries hence, and still praise greatness, they will know the name of Winston Churchill.

In keeping with aims to share the Nation's abundance, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Marketing Service recently has begun to buy oleomargarine for distribution to needy families and charitable institutions. The steel industry's salami tactics -- a little price increase at a time -- have resulted in price boosts on about 12 per cent of total steel production since October.

At the same time, the industry finished the year with a new record of output -- close to 127 million tons (117 million tons in 1965 was the old mark). Profit return, while below that of most other industries, was a substantial 17 per cent higher than 1963 for the first half of the year.

Since steel is such a fundamental part of the economy, the immediate question is whether this "creeping selectivity" will be translated into a new bout of not-so-creeping inflation.

Undoubtedly, the Steelworkers, whose contracts run out in May, will be encouraged to make even stronger demands for what they consider their fair share of this particular pie, especially since there were no actual wage increases in the 1963 settlement, and especially in view of the generous increases won by the Auto Workers last year.

But even if the industry can absorb the inevitable labor cost increases, and even if other steel - using industries can absorb the bulk of the price increases, the situation will be one of razor-thin balance.

In addition, the steel industry's short - range gains could be nullified by stepped-up competition from foreign producers, which would be bad news not only for the industry but also for the nation's balance of payments problem.

As steel goes, so go a lot of other things -- all of them of vital interest to all of us.

A TOOT TO THE TOOTERS

Let us not begin the new year without a salute to a group of unsung heroes and heroines who made 1964 more pleasant and exciting for millions of Americans.

We refer to the marching bands and related performers who provided the half-time entertainment at football games.

These bands and their lovely baton twirlers and dancers are terrific. Their skills are amazing. Despite their youth, they play, dance and twirl superbly-- and they do it while executing maneuvers a precision drill team would be proud to equal.

Furthermore, they often do it in weather that would make a seasoned polar bear turn on the electric blanket.

Our sincere thanks to these talented youngsters and their instructors who give so many of us so much pleasure. Football wouldn't be the same without them.

Let's hear it for them, fans!

The New York Public Library houses more than four and a half million books and is prepared to answer almost any question anyone might ask, although some questions are strange. A woman came in to find out how to feed an eel--her daughter had just brought one home. One elderly, slightly staggering man asked for the date of McKinley's assassination. He had been sent as a committee of one by the "boys" in the saloon where a terrific argument was raging. When he left with the information he turned to the librarian. 'Thank God for the New York Public Library,' he said. 'Guys all over the city would kill each other in arguments if they couldn't come here and get the truth.'

To The Nation, a weekly magazine, I wrote:

In an editorial, with the headline 'It's Delightful, It's Delectable, It's Deductible,' you say: 'A entertains B, presents the bill to his own corporation, which pays and deducts from its income tax. Then B entertains A. Uncle Sam pays it all.'

I say this is untrue. I say Uncle Sam pays 52% of the bill, but not all.

Entertainment may be charged to expense, subject to review by the internal revenue agents. Expense reduces profits. The corporation profit tax is 52%. The corporation must pay 48% of the entertainment bill.

Another mistake is often made by those who say personal gifts to charity and other things are deductible. They imply that the whole gift is paid by Uncle Sam. So-called 'tax free gifts' are deductible from income. If a man is in the 30% income bracket, he pays 70% of the gift, Uncle Sam 30%.

The publisher of The Nation acknowledged and printed my letter. He said my criticism was valid.

LET THE USERS PAY

Back in 1953, the Post Office Department inaugurated a policy of moving first-class mail by air on a space available basis. In other words, if you happen to be lucky, your 5-cent stamp gets you 8-cents worth of carriage. It was argued that an overall economy in mail transporting costs would result.

Now the Genera' Accounting Office, which is the watchdog of federal spending, has reviewed the airlift program for 1960-61. And it has found, and has so reported to Congress, that the Department has incurred unnecessary costs because of the airlift. Specifically, it says, rather than reducing costs by a predicted $212,000 a year, expansion of the program has increased them by more than a million, or by about 85 per cent more than the costs of surface transportation. The GAO also noted that there was airlift service on certain routes on weekends and at certain other times when existing surface transportation could provide the same service at substantial reductions in the Department's transportation costs.

It seems only reasonable that those who want their mail to be airlifted be required to stick on the proper postage. Surface transportation of regular mail --which is primarily provided by the railroads with their huge fleets of mailcars--is efficient, meeting any demand as the almost incredible job done at Christmas time attests year after year. The sole advantage of the airlift is speed and that is only a factor when great distances are involved. And those who find a need for speed should pay for it.

The Red Cross has estimated that more than 16,000 families in these five states suffered major property losses. There are dozens of known dead.

The Christmastime disaster was caused by an unusual combination of weather forces: Heavy rainfall stalled over the area by opposing high pressure systems and warm air which melted mountain snow. The result was the "explosion" of scores of normally small docile streams.

The actual extent of the disaster, by both human and financial measure, cannot be minimized. Great as it was, however, it would have been far worse had it not been for that oldest of man's weapons against this enemy--the dam.

In Oregon, for example, an Army Corps of Engineers spokesman credited the Willamette Basic Flood Control Project with saving Portland from a catastrophe that would have cost more than the price of all the dams in the state.

In California, the flooding that punished the Central Valley in 1955 was not repeated thanks to the Oroville Dam which, though only half completed, absorbed the force of the temperamental Feather and Yuba Rivers.

The survivors of 1964's flood may take some comfort from the fact that eventually all of Northern California will be flood-proofed by dams. Ironically, it will not be the needs of the north but of heavily populated and thirsty Southern California that will be chiefly responsible for this.

Water is simply becoming too precious a resource--not only in the West but all over the country--to be allowed to run off into the sea, let alone to be periodically squandered in devastating and costly floods.

H. L. Hunt Says

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS

One of the most vitally important duties of the President of the United States is appointing good men to fill high and sensitive official posts.

In an age of big government, cabinet secretaries and top administrators in Washington wield enormous power. Obviously the men who hold these offices will play a major part in deciding the future of our country and all who live in it.

The foremost prerequisite for every man being considered for appointment to high federal office should be absolute, unquestioned loyalty to the United States, even in the eyes of his critics.

No pressures, however strong or from whatever source; no bonds of friendship, however deep and sincere; no calls of ambition, however siren-like, should bring about the slightest bending of this high standard. For when it begins to bend, it will soon break; and when it is broken for one high office, it will soon be broken for others.

Good Americans should remember, as they watch Presidential appointments being made, that the Constitutional requirement for confirmation of these appointments by the Senate is no longer a dependable safeguard. Most appointments are approved "automatically" once the President makes them. Only in the rarest cases are they ever challenged.

The checking must be done, and the high standard of loyalty applied before the appointment is made, when the candidates are being considered.

Surely no one can object to giving loyalty to country first place as a requirement in selecting public servants.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON -- Among the Roosevelt intimates, Winston Churchill is best remembered for clomping down the second floor hall of the White House, his slippers flapping, his crimson silk kimono, with gold dragons embroidered on it, half draped around his rotund, naked tummy.

There was no Blair House in those days, and the Prime Minister of England, on his frequent trips to confer with President Roosevelt, was invited to be a White House guest. He kept such unholy hours, sleeping until three in the afternoon and staying up until 3 a.m., that the Joint Chiefs of Staff eventually complained about it.

They pointed out that Winston would wait until after midnight, when they weren't around, to argue FDR into important war decisions. After midnight, the president, following a long, hard day, was weary while Churchill, after sleeping all day, was full of vigor and eloquence.

One of these late night sessions was credited with FDR's original agreement to bow to Winston and transfer Gen. George Marshall to Europe.

At the Ottawa Conference in 1942, Marshall had clashed with Sir Alan Brooke, British Chief of Staff, over his demand for faster British action in the India-Burma theatre. Sir Alan resented this, and later, when Churchill and FDR were alone, Winston adroitly suggested that the allies needed a man of Marshall's stature to command the European theatre, where, incidentally, he would have nothing further to say about the India-Burma apathy.

Reaction in the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and later the public, was so critical that the decision was reversed.

THE CHURCHILL FACTIONS

Among Roosevelt intimates, there were two schools regarding the doughty and crusty Prime Minister, and their opinions about him were just as vigorous as his about them. One school was led by Mrs. Roosebelt, who eventually got so down on Winston that when he would move into the White House she moved up to Hyde Park.

Mrs. Roosevelt's difference with Winston was not over the way he turned her housekeeping topsy-turvy by keeping the servants up all night, but over the independence of India and other British colonies.

U. S. military and diplomatic leaders supported Mrs. Roosevelt, though for somewhat different reasons. Sumner Welles, longtime Under Secretary of State, and Ambassador William Phillips, a former Under Secretary, had argued that if the Indian people were given a pledge of independence they would enter the war with enthusiasm and supply the manpower for the Burma front, thereby saving American lives.

But Churchill said no. And he would pound the table indignantly, insist that no one knew how to handle India except the British, and shout "Blood will flow" if there was American interference.

SEED OF THE EMPIRE

At times the argument among Roosevelt advisers was bitter, especially over Churchill's opposition to the second front across the English Channel. This reached a crisis at Casablanca in 1943, when the U.S. general staff argued that the way to win the war in a hurry was by a direct attack on Germany across the Channel. Churchill was opposed, finally stipulated that if such a second front was undertaken the troop ratio would have to be 70 per cent American to 30 per cent British.

"We cannot squander the seed of the Empire," he said, referring to expected loss of manpower.

However, it would have taken one year to transport enough American troops to England to carry out this ratio, and Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, Chief of War Plans, argued that the British, with a sizable army already in England, could participate on a 50-50 basis. In this case the second front could be started in the summer of 1943.

Churchill was quite irked at Wedemeyer. However, he won his point. The cross-channel operation was delayed for a year and a half, and the long, costly campaign up the Boot of Italy began.

After Casablanca, Churchill suggested that Lord Louis Mountbatten needed an expert liaison officer for his campaign in India, and specifically asked that Gen. Wedemeyer be attached to Mountbatten. Wedemeyer was an expert on German tactics, knew nothing about the Far East, but was transferred to India anyway.

Another hot argument took place among Roosevelt advisers --later among Truman advisers over Greece.

At Casablanca, Churchill got a commitment that the Mediterranean operation be under British jurisdiction, that all American personnel travel on British planes, all telegrams be sent over British wireless, all American labels be scratched off lend-lease goods and replaced with labels reading "Britain Delivers."

American officials resented this bitterly. And the resentment rose to a crescendo when Churchill sent the British army into Athens with telegraphic instructions to Gen. Ronald Scobie--"Treat Athens like a conquered city."

It was the shooting down of Greek women and children by Gen. Scobie on the streets of Athens at the end of the war which led to a communist-inspired civil war and the Truman Doctrine which replaced British rule with an American Protectorate for Greece.

There was great admiration for the old bulldog's indomitable determination to defend the British Empire at all costs in those war days, but there was also a lot of feeling that the war could have been won a little quicker if the old bulldog hadn't been quite so indomitable.

Inside Labor

By VICTOR RIESEL

NEW YORK: -- Unnoticed by a forgetful public, a local grand jury has been probing the conspiracy which launched bloody, barricade-building, window smashing, looting, and rioting that turned streets into shambles here last summer.

In recent weeks, at least 18 defiant young self-proclaimed revolutionaries have been quizzed. Most of them are avowed disciples of mainland China's Mao Tse-tung who talk openly of carrying his guerrilla tactics onto the streets of America's cities.

The reluctant witnesses are tough, well trained, direct actionists who lead the upsurging Progressive Labor Movement (PLM) which is quite serious about its revolutionary doctrines. They are obviously well directed. They apparently have a quasi-military central command. They are fully financed. They have no dearth of specialists in guerrilla tactics or of "agit-props", agitation-propagandists.

They find no difficulty in deluging this city and other metropolises, with expensive, deftly written newspapers, magazines and pamphlets championing Peking's Communist line.

They issue regional and neighborhood publications.

But what troubles the federal and local authorities most--and what has brought observers from other cities into this huge community, is the complex of sub-organizations they are able to project into the tense, teeming multi-racial, multi-tongued slum neighborhoods.

These are linked with hard hitting pseudo labor groups which have attempted to provoke chaos on the docks and bitterness among hundreds of thousands of welfare and relief recipients during the strikes here.

His aide is vice chairman Willima Epton, who doubles as head of the PLM's Harlem Branch. Epton was arrested last August 5 on charges of committing criminal anarchy and incitement to commit bodily harm to police officers and local judges.

The third is a mysterious Walter Linder, their publicist, and labor specialist. One of his latest creations is the Railroad Workers Unemployment Council. This was set up in an effort to infiltrate the ranks of those now being laid off by the railroads under a recent Supreme Court decision.

The trio's most recent and most ambitious project was an effort to prolong the national waterfront strike. Last week they devoted much of their eight page, expensively printed tabloid, Challenge, to attacks on leaders of the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) and the federal government. This edition was prepared by one obviously intimate with the most complicated water front matters. No amateur job, this.

Thousands of copies were distributed along the paralyzed Manhattan and Brooklyn docks. All went with precision. Young men appeared, distributed their bundles, spread their papers amongst striking longshoremen and disappeared quickly. Some were chased off, and swiftly made their way to getaway cars as well as public transport.

Few ILA leaders believe the revolutionary literature had any definitive impact. But the bid was obvious. Even if a few militant dockers heeded the incitement, it was worth it to the pro-Peking group. The strike cost the country some $67 million daily.

All this activity requires heavy financing. The Challenge waterfront operation is not the only sortie into such agit-prop work in critical areas.

The revolutionary PLM floats new organizations at will--and then publishes district sections of their magazine Progressive Labor, to help publicize the new front ventures. Typical, in the northern section of this city, is their new Organization of Spanish Speaking Workers.

This is a direct appeal not only to the huge Puerto Rican community here but to the big Cuban population. The PLM is ever hopeful of whipping up a movement for the independence of Puerto Rico.

The emergence of a direct-action youth movement devoted to guerrilla tactics on city streets in this community alone would be disturbing. But it is nationally significant because of the PLM leaders' plans to use their experiences in New York as the basis of invasion of scores of other cities with Spanish speaking populations and heavily populated Negro districts.

The plans also prove that the Maoists are not excluding the U.S. from their militant infiltration of big cities across the world. And Maoist infiltration means turbulence. The grand jury here will prove this. The public should take note.

If fire destroyed your home today you might be in for an even ruder shock than you think.

Because the chances are better than even that your insurance coverage is insufficient to replace either your home or your personal possessions.

If your home is more than three years old, in fact, it is almost certainly underinsured if you haven't updated your home insurance coverage since you moved in.

The rise in home construction costs and personal property values in recent years has caused more than half of all insured homes in the United States to be underinsured.

Figures computed reveal that on a national average the value of personal property items, from electric can openers to color TV sets, has jumped by 31 per cent in the last 10 years.

Home construction costs have risen by 19 per cent in the same period, the company said.

In a fairly typical situation, it would cost a homeowner a tidy $4,400 of his own money today to replace a home and possessions that were fully insured 10 years ago.

That figure is based on statistical averages showing that it would cost $17,850 now to build a home that cost $15,000 to build 10 years ago, and that the family with personal property valued at $5,000 then would have $6,550 worth of such goods now.

The latter increase is attributable not only to the rise in prices of personal property items over the years, but also to the rise in their quantity and quality as a result of the general improvement in American living standards.

The statistics become progressively more dramatic the further back you take them. Home construction costs have risen by an average 103 per cent since 1945, for example, and personal property values are up a whopping 155 per cent.

To guard against possible loss from underinsurance, periodic reviews of homeowners policies or fire coverages are recommended.

Additionally, an up-to-date inventory of personal property and its estimated values should be kept in your office or safe deposit box or elsewhere away from the home to guide you in reporting losses to your insurance company in the event of fire or other misfortune.

In view of the fact that fire damages American homes at a better than one-a-minute clip over the course of a year, that's pretty good advice.

Churchill's adult life spanned all the way from the battle of Khartoum, which he witnessed (and which to us today seems like something out of medieval history), to the launching of a space probe to Mars.

A soldier and correspondent in his early manhood, Churchill by birth and talent was destined to find his career in government. Yet it was not until 1940, at an age when most men would be thinking of retirement, that his greatest days began.

It was Hitler's boast that he was Germany and Germany was Hitler, but truly, in those dark days of the Battle of Britain, Winston Churchill was Britain -- to the world and to his own people.

It was "Winnie" -- with his always present cigar in one hand, the other making the "V" sign of victory -- scrambling over the rubble of what was once a London building, or following behind troops training in the field, or inspecting the landing beaches in Normandy, or -- at last -- inspecting Hitler's death bunker in Berlin.

Churchill in his long life knew almost every measure of success and fame which any man could reasonably hope for -- as well as the ignominy of military blunders and political exile that would have broken a lesser man.

He received as many honors as any man could reasonably expect from a grateful and admiring world. But if the list of his titles and honors is long, the list of his accomplishments is longer.

Statesman, painter, Noble prize - winning historian, he enriched our lives and language with his memorable speeches. To find his equal in the ability to stir men's souls with words, one must go back at least as far as Lincoln, perhaps to Pericles of Athens 2,300 years ago.

And if men walk this earth 23 centuries hence, and still praise greatness, they will know the name of Winston Churchill.

The steel industry's salami tactics -- a little price increase at a time -- have resulted in price boosts on about 12 per cent of total steel production since October.

At the same time, the industry finished the year with a new record of output -- close to 127 million tons (117 million tons in 1965 was the old mark). Profit return, while below that of most other industries, was a substantial 17 per cent higher than 1963 for the first half of the year.

Since steel is such a fundamental part of the economy, the immediate question is whether this "creeping selectivity" will be translated into a new bout of not-so-creeping inflation.

Undoubtedly, the Steelworkers, whose contracts run out in May, will be encouraged to make even stronger demands for what they consider their fair share of this particular pie, especially since there were no actual wage increases in the 1963 settlement, and especially in view of the generous increases won by the Auto Workers last year.

But even if the industry can absorb the inevitable labor cost increases, and even if other steel - using industries can absorb the bulk of the price increases, the situation will be one of razor-thin balance.

In addition, the steel industry's short - range gains could be nullified by stepped-up competition from foreign producers, which would be bad news not only for the industry but also for the nation's balance of payments problem.

As steel goes, so go a lot of other things -- all of them of vital interest to all of us.

A TOOT TO THE TOOTERS

Let us not begin the new year without a salute to a group of unsung heroes and heroines who made 1964 more pleasant and exciting for millions of Americans.

We refer to the marching bands and related performers who provided the half-time entertainment at football games.

These bands and their lovely baton twirlers and dancers are terrific. Their skills are amazing. Despite their youth, they play, dance and twirl superbly -- and they do it while executing maneuvers a precision drill team would be proud to equal.

Furthermore, they often do it in weather that would make a seasoned polar bear turn on the electric blanket.

Our sincere thanks to these talented youngsters and their instructors who give so many of us so much pleasure. Football wouldn't be the same without them.

Let's hear it for them, fans!

The New York Public Library houses more than four and a half million books and is prepared to answer almost any question anyone might ask, although some questions are strange. A woman came in to find out how to feed an eel--her daughter had just brought one home. One elderly, slightly staggering man asked for the date of McKinley's assassination. He had been sent as a committee of one by the "boys" in the saloon where a terrific argument was raging. When he left with the information he turned to the librarian. 'Thank God for the New York Public Library,' he said. 'Guys all over the city would kill each other in arguments if they couldn't come here and get the truth.'

To The Nation, a weekly magazine, I wrote:

In an editorial, with the headline 'It's Delightful, It's Delectable, It's Deductible,' you say: 'A entertains B, presents the bill to his own corporation, which pays and deducts from its income tax. Then B entertains A. Uncle Sam pays it all.'

I say this is untrue. I say Uncle Sam pays 52% of the bill, but not all.

Entertainment may be charged to expense, subject to review by the internal revenue agents. Expense reduces profits. The corporation profit tax is 52%. The corporation must pay 48% of the entertainment bill.

Another mistake is often made by those who say personal gifts to charity and other things are deductible. They imply that the whole gift is paid by Uncle Sam. So-called 'tax free gifts' are deductible from income. If a man is in the 30% income bracket, he pays 70% of the gift, Uncle Sam 30%.

The publisher of The Nation acknowledged and printed my letter. He said my criticism was valid.

LET THE USERS PAY

Back in 1953, the Post Office Department inaugurated a policy of moving first-class mail by air on a space available basis. In other words, if you happen to be lucky, your 5-cent stamp gets you 8-cents worth of carriage. It was argued that an overall economy in mail transporting costs would result.

Now the General Accounting Office, which is the watchdog of federal spending, has reviewed the airlift program for 1960-61. And it has found, and has so reported to Congress, that the Department has incurred unnecessary costs because of the airlift. Specifically, it says, rather than reducing costs by a predicted $212,000 a year, expansion of the program has increased them by more than a million, or by about 85 per cent more than the costs of surface transportation. The GAO also noted that there was airlift service on certain routes on weekends and at certain other times when existing surface transportation could provide the same service at substantial reductions in the Department's transportation costs.

It seems only reasonable that those who want their mail to be airlifted be required to stick on the proper postage. Surface transportation of regular mail --which is primarily provided by the railroads with their huge fleets of mailcars--is efficient, meeting any demand as the almost incredible job done at Christmas time attests year after year. The sole advantage of the airlift is speed and that is only a factor when great distances are involved. And those who find a need for speed should pay for it.

The Red Cross has estimated that more than 16,000 families in these five states suffered major property losses. There are dozens of known dead.

The Christmastime disaster was caused by an unusual combination of weather forces: Heavy rainfall stalled over the area by opposing high pressure systems and warm air which melted mountain snow. The result was the "explosion" of scores of normally small docile streams.

The actual extent of the disaster, by both human and financial measure, cannot be minimized. Great as it was, however, it would have been far worse had it not been for that oldest of man's weapons against this enemy--the dam.

In Oregon, for example, an Army Corps of Engineers spokesman credited the Willamette Basic Flood Control Project with saving Portland from a catastrophe that would have cost more than the price of all the dams in the state.

In California, the flooding that punished the Central Valley in 1955 was not repeated thanks to the Oroville Dam which, though only half completed, absorbed the force of the temperamental Feather and Yuba Rivers.

The survivors of 1964's flood may take some comfort from the fact that eventually all of Northern California will be flood-proofed by dams. Ironically, it will not be the needs of the north but of heavily populated and thirsty Southern California that will be chiefly responsible for this.

Water is simply becoming too precious a resource--not only in the West but all over the country--to be allowed to run off into the sea, let alone to be periodically squandered in devastating and costly floods.

H. L. Hunt Says

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS

One of the most vitally important duties of the President of the United States is appointing good men to fill high and sensitive official posts.

In an age of big government, cabinet secretaries and top administrators in Washington wield enormous power. Obviously the men who hold these offices will play a major part in deciding the future of our country and all who live in it.

The foremost prerequisite for every man being considered for appointment to high federal office should be absolute, unquestioned loyalty to the United States, even in the eyes of his critics.

No pressures, however strong or from whatever source; no bonds of friendship, however deep and sincere; no calls of ambition, however siren-like, should bring about the slightest bending of this high standard. For when it begins to bend, it will soon break; and when it is broken for one high office, it will soon be broken for others.

Good Americans should remember, as they watch Presidential appointments being made, that the Constitutional requirement for confirmation of these appointments by the Senate is no longer a dependable safeguard. Most appointments are approved "automatically" once the President makes them. Only in the rarest cases are they ever challenged.

The checking must be done, and the high standard of loyalty applied before the appointment is made, when the candidates are being considered.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON -- Among the Roosevelt intimates, Winston Churchill is best remembered for clomping down the second floor hall of the White House, his slippers flapping, his crimson silk kimono, with gold dragons embroidered on it, half draped around his rotund, naked tummy.

There was no Blair House in those days, and the Prime Minister of England, on his frequent trips to confer with President Roosevelt, was invited to be a White House guest. He kept such unholy hours, sleeping until three in the afternoon and staying up until 3 a.m., that the Joint Chiefs of Staff eventually complained about it.

They pointed out that Winston would wait until after midnight, when they weren't around, to argue FDR into important war decisions. After midnight, the president, following a long, hard day, was weary while Churchill, after sleeping all day, was full of vigor and eloquence.

One of these late night sessions was credited with FDR's original agreement to bow to Winston and transfer Gen. George Marshall to Europe.

At the Ottawa Conference in 1942, Marshall had clashed with Sir Alan Brooke, British Chief of Staff, over his demand for faster British action in the India-Burma theatre. Sir Alan resented this, and later, when Churchill and FDR were alone, Winston adroitly suggested that the allies needed a man of Marshall's stature to command the European theatre, where, incidentally, he would have nothing further to say about the India-Burma apathy.

Reaction in the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and later the public, was so critical that the decision was reversed.

THE CHURCHILL FACTIONS

Among Roosevelt intimates, there were two schools regarding the doughty and crusty Prime Minister, and their opinions about him were just as vigorous as his about them. One school was led by Mrs. Roosebelt, who eventually got so down on Winston that when he would move into the White House she moved up to Hyde Park.

Mrs. Roosevelt's difference with Winston was not over the way he turned her housekeeping topsy-turvy by keeping the servants up all night, but over the independence of India and other British colonies.

U. S. military and diplomatic leaders supported Mrs. Roosevelt, though for somewhat different reasons. Sumner Welles, longtime Under Secretary of State, and Ambassador William Phillips, a former Under Secretary, had argued that if the Indian people were given a pledge of independence they would enter the war with enthusiasm and supply the manpower for the Burma front, thereby saving American lives.

But Churchill said no. And he would pound the table indignantly, insist that no one knew how to handle India except the British, and shout "Blood will flow" if there was American interference.

SEED OF THE EMPIRE

At times the argument among Roosevelt advisers was bitter, especially over Churchill's opposition to the second front across the English Channel. This reached a crisis at Casablanca in 1943, when the U.S. general staff argued that the way to win the war in a hurry was by a direct attack on Germany across the Channel. Churchill was opposed, finally stipulated that if such a second front was undertaken the troop ratio would have to be 70 per cent American to 30 per cent British.

"We cannot squander the seed of the Empire," he said, referring to expected loss of manpower.

However, it would have taken one year to transport enough American troops to England to carry out this ratio, and Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, Chief of War Plans, argued that the British, with a sizable army already in England, could participate on a 50-50 basis. In this case the second front could be started in the summer of 1943.

Churchill was quite irked at Wedemeyer. However, he won his point. The cross-channel operation was delayed for a year and a half, and the long, costly campaign up the Boot of Italy began.

After Casablanca, Churchill suggested that Lord Louis Mountbatten needed an expert liaison officer for his campaign in India, and specifically asked that Gen. Wedemeyer be attached to Mountbatten. Wedemeyer was an expert on German tactics, knew nothing about the Far East, but was transferred to India anyway.

Another hot argument took place among Roosevelt advisers --later among Truman advisers over Greece.

At Casablanca, Churchill got a commitment that the Mediterranean operation be under British jurisdiction, that all American personnel travel on British planes, all telegrams be sent over British wireless, all American labels be scratched off lend-lease goods and replaced with labels reading "Britain Delivers."

American officials resented this bitterly. And the resentment rose to a crescendo when Churchill sent the British army into Athens with telegraphic instructions to Gen. Ronald Scobie--"Treat Athens like a conquered city."

It was the shooting down of Greek women and children by Gen. Scobie on the streets of Athens at the end of the war which led to a communist-inspired civil war and the Truman Doctrine which replaced British rule with an American Protectorate for Greece.

There was great admiration for the old bulldog's indomitable determination to defend the British Empire at all costs in those war days, but there was also a lot of feeling that the war could have been won a little quicker if the old bulldog hadn't been quite so indomitable.

Inside Labor

By VICTOR RIESEL

NEW YORK:-- Unnoticed by a forgetful public, a local grand jury has been probing the conspiracy which launched bloody, barricade-building, window smashing, looting, and rioting that turned streets into shambles here last summer.

In recent weeks, at least 18 defiant young self-proclaimed revolutionaries have been quizzed. Most of them are avowed disciples of mainland China's Mao Tse-tung who talk openly of carrying his guerrilla tactics onto the streets of America's cities.

The reluctant witnesses are tough, well trained, direct actionists who lead the upsurging Progressive Labor Movement (PLM) which is quite serious about its revolutionary doctrines. They are obviously well directed. They apparently have a quasi-military central command. They are fully financed. They have no dearth of specialists in guerrilla tactics or of "agit-props", agitation-propagandists.

They find no difficulty in deluging this city and other metropolises, with expensive, deftly written newspapers, magazines and pamphlets championing Peking's Communist line.

They issue regional and neighborhood publications.

But what troubles the federal and local authorities most--and what has brought observers from other cities into this huge community, is the complex of sub-organizations they are able to project into the tense, teeming multi-racial, multi-tongued slum neighborhoods.

These are linked with hard hitting pseudo labor groups which have attempted to provoke chaos on the docks and bitterness among hundreds of thousands of welfare and relief recipients during the strikes here.

His aide is vice chairman Willima Epton, who doubles as head of the PLM's Harlem Branch. Epton was arrested last August 5 on charges of committing criminal anarchy and incitement to commit bodily harm to police officers and local judges.

The third is a mysterious Walter Linder, their publicist, and labor specialist. One of his latest creations is the Railroad Workers Unemployment Council. This was set up in an effort to infiltrate the ranks of those now being laid off by the railroads under a recent Supreme Court decision.

The trio's most recent and most ambitious project was an effort to prolong the national waterfront strike. Last week they devoted much of their eight page, expensively printed tabloid, Challenge, to attacks on leaders of the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) and the federal government. This edition was prepared by one obviously intimate with the most complicated water front matters. No amateur job, this.

Thousands of copies were distributed along the paralyzed Manhattan and Brooklyn docks. All went with precision. Young men appeared, distributed their bundles, spread their papers amongst striking longshoremen and disappeared quickly. Some were chased off, and swiftly made their way to getaway cars as well as public transport.

Few ILA leaders believe the revolutionary literature had any definitive impact. But the bid was obvious. Even if a few militant dockers heeded the incitement, it was worth it to the pro-Peking group. The strike cost the country some $67 million daily.

All this activity requires heavy financing. The Challenge waterfront operation is not the only sortie into such agit-prop work in critical areas.

The revolutionary PLM floats new organizations at will--and then publishes district sections of their magazine Progressive Labor, to help publicize the new front ventures. Typical, in the northern section of this city, is their new Organization of Spanish Speaking Workers.

This is a direct appeal not only to the huge Puerto Rican community here but to the big Cuban population. The PLM is ever hopeful of whipping up a movement for the independence of Puerto Rico.

The emergence of a direct-action youth movement devoted to guerrilla tactics on city streets in this community alone would be disturbing. But it is nationally significant because of the PLM leaders' plans to use their experiences in New York as the basis of invasion of scores of other cities with Spanish speaking populations and heavily populated Negro districts.

The plans also prove that the Maoists are not excluding the U.S. from their militant infiltration of big cities across the world. And Maoist infiltration means turbulence. The grand jury here will prove this. The public should take note.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: A neighbor of mine has hated me ever since last December when I got the last good Christmas tree on the lot. She was right behind me and missed out on the tree by two minutes. This woman is teaching her children to hate my children and I don't know what to do about it.

Saturday I took my youngsters to the matinee. We ran into this woman's children in the lobby. My 11-year-old son said, "Hi" to her son, aged 12. The boy replied, "Shut up, you ugly rat." My son was hurt and puzzled. Finally he turned to me with tears in his eyes and asked, "Why would he answer me like that, mother?"

Is there something I can do to combat this awful thing? -- NO WORDS FOR TELLING

Dear No Words: The best way to "combat this awful thing" is to teach your children to be kind and courteous to everyone although at times it may demand almost superhuman self-control. When the neighbor children behave like savages explain it is because they don't know better and that you hope one day they will learn.

Dear Ann Landers: Please pass the word to all middle-aged men who are tired of their "unexciting wives" and believe a new life awaits them after they get a divorce and marry a younger woman. Don't do it.

My wife became involved with another man. What she really wanted was more attention from me. But I was too busy. Instead of dealing with the problem intelligently, I decided to get even with her by chasing a young girl.

To make a long story short, I chased the young girl until she caught me. I married her and what a horrible mistake that was! She hates keeping house, wants to eat out all the time and whines when she doesn't get her way.

I can't spend my energy (and money) running around every night. I have to work hard to support two families. Her "cute little ways" now make me sick. A man 45 is no match for a young girl -- physically, financially, socially or any other way.

So, who's sorry now? My ex-wife, my three children, the young girl I married and most of all me, because it's all my fault. Again I say, DON'T DO IT. -- BEN THAR

Dear Ben: Your fault? Not 100%. Your wife should not have handed you a divorce so fast. A trial separation would have made much more sense.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 14 years old and in the 10th grade. I wanted to look especially pretty at a party last week so I asked my mother if I could shave my legs. She said, "No." I went ahead and shaved them anyway. Honestly, Ann, I had to do it.

Now, one week later, the hair seems to be growing back awfully fast. I think I will have to shave my legs again very soon if I want to look like a human being instead of a gorilla.

Please tell me if it's true that the oftener a person shaves the faster the hair grows. I'd hate to have to shave my legs every day. Thank you a lot.--MISS BRISTLES

Dear Miss: Shaving does make hair grow faster but once every other week should be often enough. Between times use a little liquid bleach.

Your druggist will suggest bleaches which are safe and non - irritating. Some people prefer hair - removing creams to shaving. Try it and see which works best for you.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting - And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: A neighbor of mine has hated me ever since last December when I got the last good Christmas tree on the lot. She was right behind me and missed out on the tree by two minutes. This woman is teaching her children to hate my children and I don't know what to do about it.

Saturday I took my youngsters to the matinee. We ran into this woman's children in the lobby. My 11-year-old son said, "Hi" to her son, aged 12. The boy replied, "Shut up, you ugly rat." My son was hurt and puzzled. Finally he turned to me with tears in his eyes and asked, "Why would he answer me like that, mother?"

Cincinnati Out Of Race Second Year

Ed Juker's Cincinnati Bearcats, once the scourge of Missouri Valley conference basketball, have dropped out of the championship race for the second year in a row with a losing streak triggered by defeats to Bradley at Cincy.

A year ago a 10-point defeat by Bradley at the Cincy fieldhouse, where the Bearcats are usually invincible, started a five-game losing streak. This season Bradley started it again with an amazing 104-80 romp at Cincinnati Jan. 16. The Cincy lost 82-80 in triple overtime at Louisville.

Drake completed the job by whipping the Bearcats 89-80 at Des Moines Saturday in an afternoon television game. These three games sent Cincy's defensive average up to 70.4 points a game, highest in Jucker's career at Cincy. He wants this figure closer to 55 a game.

The Bearcats now stand 1-4 in the league and 9-6 for all games.

In Cincy's first six years in the league, the Bearcats won or tied for six Valley crowns, took 70 of 78 league games, 161 of 177 overall and two NCAA crowns.

Fourth-ranked Wichita stayed on top at 5-0 and St. Louis second at 4-1 as the Valley race largely marked time last week because of final exams. The Shockers will have All America Dave Stallworth for only two more games: Loyola at Chicago Stadium Friday and Louisville at Wichita Saturday. They took another jolt last week with the dismissal of two players from the squad.

Nate Bowman, starting 6-10 pivot, and Gerald Davis, his 6-9 stand-in, were shelved for poor attitudes and work both in class and in practice. It's possible they will be back by Friday if they hit the books, but one Wichita official termed this unlikely.

The talented 6-7 Stallworth, with peak performances, could lift the Shockers past the next two games, but their title hopes might be gone after that without Bowman. St. Louis plays Cincy in St. Louis Saturday.

In other games this week, St. Joseph's of Indiana is at Cincy Wednesday, Tulsa at Drake Thursday, and North Texas at Drake and Tulsa at Bradley, both Saturday. The Tulsa-Bradley game will be televised.

Valley teams split two non-conference games Saturday night, Louisville losing 83-78 at Dayton and Tulsa beating Loyola of Los Angeles 70-59 at Tulsa.

Stokes Is On Slow Road To Recovery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Today was a big day for Maurice Stokes, a cheerful and determined young man despite a seven-year illness.

His courageous fight for recovery inched a step forward when the former basketball star was moved across town to another hospital —where he hopes to learn to walk and feed himself again.

He's determined to get well.

Stokes has spent the last 6½ years in Christ Hospital, most of the time either lying or sitting helplessly in a private room. Today he was moved to Good Samaritan to make use of the $300,000 physical rehabilitation program there.

"He's looking forward to this very much," said Stokes' good friend, Jack Twyman of the Cincinnati Royals.

Twyman said Stokes' over-all progress is good.

"Maurie is doing real fine," Twyman said. "He can talk much better —the most encouraging part of his rehabilitation.

"But he can't walk by himself yet although he can stand. He still cannot feed himself.

"He's got a tremendous attitude," Twyman added. "He's always maintained a competitive spirit and optimism. He's not depressed at all.

"But there's no way of telling at all when he might leave the hospital for good."

Twyman is Stokes' benefactor and legal guardian. He has undertaken a massive job of raising and handling money to make sure Stokes gets the best of treatment.

CINCINNATI (AP) -- Steve Thomas of Xavier, the nation's fifth-leading collegiate basketball scorer, will be out of action tonight when the Musketeers meet Detroit.

Thomas, who is averaging 30.2 points a game, suffered a severe sprain to his right knee in Xavier's 96-90 victory over Duquesne Saturday night.

Wildcats Pump In 104 Points To Down Portageville

BLOOMFIELD-- From out of the midst of a game that had 80 fouls called, the Bloomfield Wildcats came charging through to win over the Portageville Bulldogs 104-59. Bloomfield grabbed off 42 of the 80 fouls, and Portageville committed 38.

Already in trouble due to the fouls, Portageville aggravated their problems even more by having troubles getting up on the boards. In fact they had trouble even getting to shoot. On the offensive board they amassed a total of 6 rebounds and they cleared away 16 on defense for a total of 22 for the night. Their shooting ran into something immovable that being The Wildcats Press, off which Portageville could get only 28 shots.

Bloomfield got 57 rebounds with Mike Wise clearing off 25 of them. Ron White was his usual self, making 25 assisted with some extraordinary moves. The Wildcats managed to steal the ball away from the Bulldogs not less than 40 times. The big offensive play came from Wise with 30 points. Gillispie followed with 16, all of which he collected in the first six minutes of the game. Danny Gaines and Dale Underwood rounded out Bloomfield's double figure men with 12 and 10 respectively.

Farris and Brown were the big gunners for Portageville. Farris led with 22 with Brown following by dumping in 18. Brown scored 12 of his on free throws.

Bloomfield got the double take by winning the "B" game 35-20 behind the shooting of Bullinger with 11. Phillips paced Portageville with 13.

Bloomfield plays again tonight in the Stoddard County Tournament when they face Bell City at 6:00 following Richland and Woodland (B), who clash at 4:30. At 7:30 Bernie faces Puxico (B) and the last game will be between the Puxico and Richland varsities at 9:00.

Brown Gets Hickok Award

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "This has been a great year — the championship and now this. Honestly, I can't say which means more now. They're both great."

It was Jimmy Brown talking. The great fullback of the champion Cleveland Browns of the National Football League had just been named winner of the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award Sunday and the $10,000 diamond-studded, gold-buckled belt that goes with it.

The championship was Brown's first with the Browns since he came up as an All-America from Syracuse.

"I would rather have the NFL title than any individual rushing championship," said the 28-year-old star who has captured the rushing crown in seven of the eight years he's been with the Browns.

"Winning the Hickok Belt this year truly surprised me," added Brown. "I thought I had a better chance in other years. This year we had so much talent—Frank Ryan, Paul Warfield, Gary Collins, and don't forget Dick Modzelewski."

Brown said he had two years to go on a three-year contract with the Browns.

"Then I'm going to call it a career," said Brown. "Two more years and I hope it will be two more championships. The championship gives you the most satisfaction."

Brown nosed out auto driving ace A.J. Foyt of Houston by seven points in the vote by a national panel of 136 sports writers and sportscasters.

Athlete Award Given To Teacher

Young, who set an American steeplechase record at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, surprised the Marine officer and 18-year-old Lindgren by taking the two-mile run Saturday night.

The 27-year-old Young, of Casa Grande, Ariz., sprinted the final quarter in 58.3 for an easy victory.

Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State set an American women's record of 6.7 in the 60-yard dash. Miss Tyus won the 100 meters at the Olympics.

Ralph Boston of the Southern California Striders sailed 26 feet, 5 inches in the long jump for victory, and Bill Crothers of Canada took the 600-yard run.

Dyrol Burleson of Oregon captured the mile in a slow 4:07.2, unheralded Earl McCullouch won the 60-yard hurdles in 7.2 as Rex Cawley, 400-meter hurdles gold medalist in the Olympics was second, and Jack Yerman of the Santa Clara Youth Village finished first in the 500-yard dash with a 59.0 clocking mile Mike Larrabee, 400-meter winner at Tokyo, was last.

Young, timed in 8:41.2, outdistanced Mills by 25 yards while young Lindgren, who had led most of the way, was third.

Boston Is Off Again To Win

BOSTON (AP) — "It's great to be a winner again," someone shouted in the Celtics' dressing room.

The Boston club, careening toward a record number of victories in a National Basketball Association season, didn't stop to mourn the end of a 16-game winning streak Saturday.

Instead, the seven-time world champions took it out on Los Angeles 117-93 Sunday, administering a stern lesson in the arts of basket making and stopping.

The triumph was the 24th in the last 26 starts for Boston which at 42-8 is eight full games ahead of Eastern Division runner-up Cincinnati with 30 to play.

The Royals beat San Francisco 124-103 Sunday, enabling the Warriors to set a league mark for consecutive losses at 16. The Warriors had previously tied the old mark of 15 set by Denver in 1949.

In the other game played Sunday night, the Baltimore Bullets turned back the St. Louis Hawks 114-106.

The Celts remain on target for 67 victories, seven better than the one-season high they established in 1960.

Coach Red Auerbach discussed the anatomy of a streak on his team after the nationally televised battle was settled by a third-quarter blitz. Boston outscored the Lakers 16-2 in the final minutes of the period it dominated 31-19.

K.C. Jones set up five baskets and scored three. Hobbling Tommy Heinsohn got seven points in the stretch and the Lakers, who had five times rallied to within a single point, were left breathless in the wake.

LONDON (AP) -- Former world lightweight champion Joe Brown of New Orleans, who is scheduled to fight in Cape Town, South Africa, next week, has withdrawn from a scheduled 10-round fight with London's Vic Andreetti Tuesday.

Cincinnati Out Of Race Second Year

Ed Juker's Cincinnati Bearcats, once the scourge of Missouri Valley conference basketball, have dropped out of the championship race for the second year in a row with a losing streak triggered by defeats to Bradley at Cincy.

A year ago a 10-point defeat by Bradley at the Cincy fieldhouse, where the Bearcats are usually invincible, started a five-game losing streak. This season Bradley started it again with an amazing 104-80 romp at Cincinnati Jan. 16. The Cincy lost 82-80 in triple overtime at Louisville.

Drake completed the job by whipping the Bearcats 89-80 at Des Moines Saturday in an afternoon television game. These three games sent Cincy's defensive average up to 70.4 points a game, highest in Jucker's career at Cincy. He wants this figure closer to 55 a game.

The Bearcats now stand 1-4 in the league and 9-6 for all games.

In Cincy's first six years in the league, the Bearcats won or tied for six Valley crowns, took 70 of 78 league games, 161 of 177 overall and two NCAA crowns.

Fourth-ranked Wichita stayed on top at 5-0 and St. Louis second at 4-1 as the Valley race largely marked time last week because of final exams. The Shockers will have All America Dave Stallworth for only two more games: Loyola at Chicago Stadium Friday and Louisville at Wichita Saturday. They took another jolt last week with the dismissal of two players from the squad.

Nate Bowman, starting 6-10 pivot, and Gerald Davis, his 6-9 stand-in, were shelved for poor attitudes and work both in class and in practice. It's possible they will be back by Friday if they hit the books, but one Wichita official termed this unlikely.

The talented 6-7 Stallworth, with peak performances, could lift the Shockers past the next two games, but their title hopes might be gone after that without Bowman. St. Louis plays Cincy in St. Louis Saturday.

In other games this week, St. Joseph's of Indiana is at Cincy Wednesday, Tulsa at Drake Thursday, and North Texas at Drake and Tulsa at Bradley, both Saturday. The Tulsa-Bradley game will be televised.

Valley teams split two non-conference games Saturkay night, Louisville losing 83-78 at Dayton and Tulsa beating Loyola of Los Angeles 70-59 at Tulsa.

Stokes Is On Slow Road To Recovery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Today was a big day for Maurice Stokes, a cheerful and determined young man despite a seven-year illness.

His courageous fight for recovery inched a step forward when the former basketball star was moved across town to another hospital —where he hopes to learn to walk and feed himself again.

Big Mo, now 31, was on his way to becoming one of the great stars in the National Basketball Association when, in March 1958, he was stricken with post-traumatic encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, which has left him paralyzed ever since.

Stokes has spent the last 6½ years in Christ Hospital, most of the time either lying or sitting helplessly in a private room. Today he was moved to Good Samaritan to make use of the $300,000 physical rehabilitation program there.

"He's looking forward to this very much," said Stokes' good friend, Jack Twyman of the Cincinnati Royals.

Twyman said Stokes' over-all progress is good.

"Maurie is doing real fine," Twyman said. "He can talk much better —the most encouraging part of his rehabilitation.

"But he can't walk by himself yet although he can stand. He still cannot feed himself.

"He's got a tremendous attitude," Twyman added. "He's always maintained a competitive spirit and optimism. He's not depressed at all.

"But there's no way of telling at all when he might leave the hospital for good."

Twyman is Stokes' benefactor and legal guardian. He has undertaken a massive job of raising and handling money to make sure Stokes gets the best of treatment.

CINCINNATI (AP) -- Steve Thomas of Xavier, the nation's fifth-leading collegiate basketball scorer, will be out of action tonight when the Musketeers meet Detroit.

Thomas, who is averaging 30.2 points a game, suffered a severe sprain to his right knee in Xavier's 96-90 victory over Duquesne Saturday night.

Wildcats Pump In 104 Points To Down Portageville

BLOOMFIELD-- From out of the midst of a game that had 80 fouls called, the Bloomfield Wildcats came charging through to win over the Portageville Bulldogs 104-59. Bloomfield grabbed off 42 of the 80 fouls, and Portageville committed 38.

Already in trouble due to the fouls, Portageville aggravated their problems even more by having troubles getting up on the boards. In fact they had trouble even getting to shoot. On the offensive board they amassed a total of 6 rebounds and they cleared away 16 on defense for a total of 22 for the night. Their shooting ran into something immovable that being The Wildcats Press, off which Portageville could get only 28 shots.

Bloomfield got 57 rebounds with Mike Wise clearing off 25 of them. Ron White was his usual self, making 25 assisted with some extraordinary moves. The Wildcats managed to steal the ball away from the Bulldogs not less than 40 times. The big offensive play came from Wise with 30 points. Gillispie followed with 16, all of which he collected in the first six minutes of the game. Danny Gaines and Dale Underwood rounded out Bloomfield's double figure men with 12 and 10 respectively.

Farris and Brown were the big gunners for Portageville. Farris led with 22 with Brown following by dumping in 18. Brown scored 12 of his on free throws.

Bloomfield got the double take by winning the "B" game 35-20 behind the shooting of Bullinger with 11. Phillips paced Portageville with 13.

Bloomfield plays again tonight in the Stoddard County Tournament when they face Bell City at 6:00 following Richland and Woodland (B), who clash at 4:30. At 7:30 Bernie faces Puxico (B) and the last game will be between the Puxico and Richland varsities at 9:00.

Brown Gets Hickok Award

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "This has been a great year — the championship and now this. Honestly, I can't say which means more now. They're both great."

It was Jimmy Brown talking. The great fullback of the champion Cleveland Browns of the National Football League had just been named winner of the S. Rae Hickok Professional Athlete of the Year Award Sunday and the $10,000 diamond-studded, gold-buckled belt that goes with it.

The championship was Brown's first with the Browns since he came up as an All-America from Syracuse.

"I would rather have the NFL title than any individual rushing championship," said the 28-year-old star who has captured the rushing crown in seven of the eight years he's been with the Browns.

"Winning the Hickok Belt this year truly surprised me," added Brown. "I thought I had a better chance in other years. This year we had so much talent—Frank Ryan, Paul Warfield, Gary Collins, and don't forget Dick Modzelewski."

Brown said he had two years to go on a three-year contract with the Browns.

"Then I'm going to call it a career," said Brown. "Two more years and I hope it will be two more championships. The championship gives you the most satisfaction."

Brown nosed out auto driving ace A.J. Foyt of Houston by seven points in the vote by a national panel of 136 sports writers and sportscasters.

Athlete Award Given To Teacher

Young, who set an American steeplechase record at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, surprised the Marine officer and 18-year-old Lindgren by taking the two-mile run Saturday night.

The 27-year-old Young, of Casa Grande, Ariz., sprinted the final quarter in 58.3 for an easy victory.

Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State set an American women's record of 6.7 in the 60-yard dash. Miss Tyus won the 100 meters at the Olympics.

Ralph Boston of the Southern California Striders sailed 26 feet, 5 inches in the long jump for victory, and Bill Crothers of Canada took the 600-yard run.

Dyrol Burleson of Oregon captured the mile in a slow 4:07.2, unheralded Earl McCullouch won the 60-yard hurdles in 7.2 as Rex Cawley, 400-meter hurdles gold medalist in the Olympics was second, and Jack Yerman of the Santa Clara Youth Village finished first in the 500-yard dash with a 59.0 clocking mile Mike Larrabee, 400-meter winner at Tokyo, was last.

Young, timed in 8:41.2, outdistanced Mills by 25 yards while young Lindgren, who had led most of the way, was third.

POPLAR BLUFF -- The Poplar Bluff Mules came in a kicking to run off with championship honors here Saturday night by downing the third seeded Kennett Indians 62-47. Greenville, seeded number two, took third place by winning over Doniphan 66-58.

Boston Is Off Again To Win

BOSTON (AP) — "It's great to be a winner again," someone shouted in the Celtics' dressing room.

The Boston club, careening toward a record number of victories in a National Basketball Association season, didn't stop to mourn the end of a 16-game winning streak Saturday.

Instead, the seven-time world champions took it out on Los Angeles 117-93 Sunday, administering a stern lesson in the arts of basket making and stopping.

The triumph was the 24th in the last 26 starts for Boston which at 42-8 is eight full games ahead of Eastern Division runner-up Cincinnati with 30 to play.

The Royals beat San Francisco 124-103 Sunday, enabling the Warriors to set a league mark for consecutive losses at 16. The Warriors had previously tied the old mark of 15 set by Denver in 1949.

In the other game played Sunday night, the Baltimore Bullets turned back the St. Louis Hawks 114-106.

The Celts remain on target for 67 victories, seven better than the one-season high they established in 1960.

Coach Red Auerbach discussed the anatomy of a streak on his team after the nationally televised battle was settled by a third-quarter blitz. Boston outscored the Lakers 16-2 in the final minutes of the period it dominated 31-19.

K.C. Jones set up five baskets and scored three. Hobbling Tommy Heinsohn got seven points in the stretch and the Lakers, who had five times rallied to within a single point, were left breathless in the wake.

LONDON (AP) -- Former world lightweight champion Joe Brown of New Orleans, who is scheduled to fight in Cape Town, South Africa, next week, has withdrawn from a scheduled 10-round fight with London's Vic Andreetti Tuesday.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL
Taken from the 1962 Encyclopaedia Britannica.
Author: Herbert G. Nicholas, Oxford University, England

Sir Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, British statesman, was born on Nov. 30, 1874, at Blenheim palace, Oxfordshire, England. He was the son of Lord Randolph Churchill and Jennie, daughter of Leonard Jerome, of New York City. He was educated at Harrow and Sandhurst. Entering the army in 1895, he saw active war service with the Malakand field force (1897) and the Tirah expeditionary force (1898); attached to the 21st Lancers, he also served with the Nile expeditionary force and was present at the battle of Omdurman (1898). These campaigns gave him material for two brilliant books, The Story of the Malakand Field Force (1898) and The River War (1899). During the South African War (1899-1902) he was correspondent for the Morning Post and wrote an account of his experiences as London to Ladysmith via Pretoria (1900). He was taken prisoner by the Boers, but escaped.

Churchill was elected Conservative M.P. for Oldham in 1900 (having unsuccessfully contested the seat in 1899), and immediately made his mark in a house which expected great things from his father's son. He excelled in the set speech elaborately prepared on the classic models, but was not at first a ready speaker. Lord Balfour once said of him that he carried "heavy but not very mobile guns," and it was only later that he became a master in the cut and thrust of debate. He had a filial reverence for the political memory of his father and his Life of Lord Randolph Churchill (1906) is one of the most interesting political biographies in the language.

In 1904, when Joseph Chamberlain's tariff reform campaign seemed likely to turn the Conservatives into a party of protection, Churchill crossed the floor of the house and joined the Liberals. In the general election of 1906 he was returned for North-West Manchester and became undersecretary for the colonies in the Campbell-Bannerman government, 1905-08.

He soon won renown by his skill and authority in defending the policy of conciliation and self-government for South Africa. With his admission to the cabinet in 1908 as president of the board of trade his standing increased. His platform oratory had a vivacity, a boldness and an epigrammatic quality that stirred popular gatherings. Into the conflict that followed the rejection of the Lloyd George budget by the house of lords he threw himself with characteristic impetuosity. As home secretary (1909-11) he was responsible for carrying the Trade Boards act, directed against sweated industries, but was rather less successful in coping with the industrial disturbances of 1911.

Transferred to the admiralty later in the year, Churchill was explicitly enjoined by Herbert Asquith to put the navy into a state of "instant and constant readiness" in case of a German attack. He was not at first successful in creating the naval war staff which was generally thought desirable, but he did introduce many valuable reforms, both administrative and technical. When war came in 1914, it found the navy both efficient and prepared.

Churchill, who had been one of the most convinced supporters of the declaration of war on Germany, was the most strenuous advocate of aggressive land and sea campaigns. He carried out the Dardanelles enterprise of 1915 in face of the disapproval of the first sea lord, Sir John Fisher. Churchill left the admiralty for the duchy of Lancaster when the expedition proved a failure and Fisher resigned. When the Liberal government collapsed in the ensuing political crisis, Churchill abandoned politics for soldiering; he went on active service in France, where he commanded the 6th Royal Scots Fusiliers.

David Lloyd George, returning to power in 1917, recalled Churchill to office, first as minister of munitions and then as combined war and air minister (1918-21). But apart from his conspicuous part in the Irish settlement, Churchill began to be less in agreement with the premier. Lloyd George disapproved of the costly British intervention in the U.S.S.R. that Churchill promoted. To be given the colonial office instead of the exchequer in 1921 was a severe disappointment. In the collapse of the coalition in 1922 Churchill lost even his seat in parliament, after representing Dundee since 1908.

Two years of retirement followed, filled, with characteristic versatility, by painting and writing. In 1924 he was returned to parliament from Epping as a Constitutionalist. Stanley Baldwin appointed him chancellor of the exchequer and in 1925 he rejoined the Conservative party. He presided over the return to the gold standard (1925), with the accompanying "revenue duties" and the derating scheme of 1928, measures not unproductive of controversy either then or since. In the same period he completed his work The World Crisis (1923-29).

With the fall of the Conservative government in 1929 a breach developed between Churchill and Baldwin. It began over India, where Churchill was opposed to any abdication of British imperial power--an opposition which led to his exclusion from the National government of 1931. In the nine years that followed Churchill led the life of a private member of parliament, writing the life of his great ancestor the 1st duke of Marlborough and only intervening in public debate on issues that profoundly moved him. As the Ramsay MacDonald, Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain governments pursued their policies of conciliation and surrender to the threats of Adolf Hitler, Churchill's protests became ever louder and more insistent. From 1936 to 1938 he particularly warned against German rearmament and British unpreparedness. In the commons' debate on the Munich agreement he asserted that is was "a defeat without a war" and "only the beginning of the reckoning." In March 1939 he pressed for an all-party government and in May urged an immediate agreement with the U.S.S.R; to both proposals Chamberlain was cool.

However, on the British declaration of war on Sept. 3, 1939, Chamberlain in response to a wide popular demand appointed Churchill to his old post at the admiralty. His energy was soon felt not only within the department but also in the work of the cabinet. But the Norwegian defeats of April and May 1940 shook public confidence in Chamberlain's leadership, and on May 10, when the German armies entered the Low Countries, Chamberlain resigned to make way for the one leader, Churchill, who could form a national coalition government. Three days later Churchill made his celebrated speech to the commons in which he said, "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat." Parliament gave him a unanimous vote of confidence.

This confidence was sustained throughout the four and one-half years that followed, stimulated by Churchill's rocklike trust in Allied victory and his frank, memorable and dynamic oratory. The story of his war premiership is the history of the British war effort because more nearly than any other war leader in British history he both directed and personified it, combining with the premiership the ministry of defense and taking a tirelessly energetic personal interest in every detail of administration. At moments of crisis he crystallized the national will, as in his memorable declaration on the occasion of Dunkirk, "We shall go on to the end, whatever the cost may be," or in the decision to reinforce the middle east in the dangerous autumn of 1940, or in the pledge to the U.S.S.R. on June 22, 1941, "Any man or state who marches with Hitler is our foe."

To nothing did Churchill more earnestly devote himself than to the construction and maintenance of what he called the "Grand Alliance." From the outset he looked forward to the day when, "The New World, with all its power and might," would step "forth to the rescue and the liberation of the Old." Churchill's conduct of relations with the United States and its wartime president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was a remarkable blend of tact and candour, of a determination, as he said, not to "liquidate" the British empire and yet of a willingness to pool sovereignty and resources in a common cause.

With the U. S.S.R. he strove unceasingly to break down the barriers of misunderstanding--witness his dispatch to Moscow of Lord Beaverbrook in Sept. 1941, and of Anthony Eden in November and his own visit to Joseph Stalin in Aug. 1942. In Dec. 1941 he went to Washington, D. C., for the first of a series of conferences with Roosevelt. The year 1942 saw British reverses in Burma, Malaya and Hong Kong; but as U.S. strength gathered and the Russians fell back on Stalingrad, there was pressure on Churchill to agree to the opening of a second front in Europe. Churchill thought this premature and successfully opposed it.

Even for 1944 he personally advocated an invasion of central Europe from the Mediterranean to coincide with Normandy landings. However, Churchill's loyalty to an agreed strategy was as complete as his advocacy of his own views was powerful. Never in history had allied forces co-operated so harmoniously as in the strategy hammered out at the six planning conferences with Roosevelt and other leaders which Churchill attended in 1943.

The successes of 1944 brought new problems. At home and abroad Churchill was attacked for supporting allegedly reactionary regimes in Belgium, Italy and Greece. Meanwhile, his conversations in Moscow in October revealed the entering wedge of disagreements with the U.S.S.R. about eastern Europe.

The next year brought victory and great popular acclaim for Churchill. But the general election of June showed that this acclaim did not extend to Churchill, the Conservative party leader. Churchill bore the brunt of the election campaign himself, broadcasting and touring the country. But, although he retained his own seat, his party was severely defeated, and he began a long vigil as leader of the opposition.

During the first Labour government after World War II (1945-50) Churchill, still boundlessly energetic in his seventies, did not confine himself to parliamentary activities, master of debate though he still showed himself to be. He also embarked on a full-scale history of World War II (6 vol., 1948-53).

His concern for British security and world peace did not flag. On March 5, 1946, in a speech at Fulton, Mo., he sharply criticized growing Soviet imperialism and advocated a "fraternal association" of the English-speaking peoples. On Sept. 19, 1946, at Zurich, Switz., he urged a closer unity in Europe, following it up with personal support for the Council of Europe, the first assembly of which he attended at Strasbourg, Fr., in 1949.

In the 1950 general election Churchill again led the Conservative party, and the Labour majority was reduced to seven. After his party won the election of Oct. 1951, Churchill again became prime minister. Here his single-minded devotion was to the cause of world peace, and his efforts were continuously bent on the realization of "talks at the summit" with Soviet leaders. However, age obliged his resignation on April 5, 1955, with these hopes unrealized although, by one of history's ironies, his chosen successor, Sir Anthony Eden, was able a few weeks later to announce to a British electorate Soviet and U. S. agreement to a four-power conference at Geneva, Switz.

Winston Churchill was named a knight of the Order of the Garter by Queen Elizabeth II on April 24, 1953.

REORGANIZATION
COMMISSION
Jefferson City, Missouri
January 8, 1965

To News Media of Missouri

The State Reorganization Commission, known as "The Little Hoover Commission" is releasing its report to the public of Missouri on January 24, 1965.

This is the second time in the more than one hundred forty years of Missouri history that such a survey of the Missouri executive state government has been made.

Perhaps some thirty per cent or more of the first report of 1955 was actually implemented into law by either legislative or administrative action. Out of one of these recommendations came the present imposition of interest on inactive state funds which has brought into the Treasury of Missouri, without one penny increase in taxes, more than $18,000,000.00.

It is difficult to secure or to retain the attention of the public concerning a governmental report such as this. It is (we hope) devoid of scandal, sadism, salacious material and other elements which to some degree attract millions of readers.

Yet, with the great expansion of government, of population, and of public expenditures, there is little hope for improvement unless we can concentrate on sober, affirmative, progressive movements for governmental reform and economy.

The report of ten years ago was given splendid publicity upon its release; and then relatively speaking dropped almost completely from public attention, except when brought indirectly into the political campaigns of contesting candidates.

With the above in mind, would it be possible for any of the news media to adopt a program (if they believe this report has merit) of presenting the Little Hoover Report over a series of several weeks in installments; with the hope of gaining greater attention by the people of Missouri and their representatives.

This is an objective, but fervent, and we hope, unselfish and altruistic plea for publicity.

Respectfully yours,
Francis Smith

Cat in School Wall a Problem For Officials

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Sand Lake elementary school here has a brand new library and multipurpose room with just one fault. There's a cat in the wall.

They got a trap from the State Fish and Game Department and baited it with cat food. In the morning, the goodies were gone, but the cat was still in the wall.

They tried two cans of sardines. Same result.

The whole thing started while Parker and employes of the contractor were inspecting the school addition. The job was finished except for closing in an inspection plate about 18 by 18 inches in size.

"We were just standing there when this big old black cat came running into the room and jumped right smack into the hole," Parker said.

"We can't use the room. We have to keep the door closed or we never will know if he comes out.

"We've seen him. That room has a glass front. Several times we've slipped up there real quite like and there he is — out in the room.

"Then you reach for that door and — wham! back he goes into the wall."

The cat has not been given a name.

"We don't know whether to call him, or it, John or Jane," Parker said.

"If it should be a female — having kittens in there — then we're really in trouble."

Says to Live Long Mine Coal; Take Whiskey Daily

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) -- John Hogue, 100 years old today has a new recipe for a long life: Mine coal.

Hogue did that for 61 years, in Kentucky, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Mining is beneficial, he said, because:

No one eats much in a coal mine. When miners get home at night they are too tired to do anything but eat a light, simple meal and go straight to bed.

Too much food and too little rest are big reasons why most people don't live to be 100, Hogue, formerly of Pineville, Ky., said.

He also said another thing may have helped him keep fit--a daily dose of whisky mixed with quinine and coal tar.

Marketing Research For Consumers

Consumers, as well as farmers, benefit from an efficient food distribution system, concluded the Marketing Research Advisory Committee of the U. S. Department of Agriculture recently.

With this in mind, this committee of national leaders in the field of marketing research recommended at its annual meeting that the Department of Agriculture increase and develop new research in the field of food distribution.

For example, research was suggested on lower - cost systems for handling perishable products en route to retail stores and public eating places. Such improvements would help make food cheaper for the consumer, the committee reasoned, while at the same time help the producer market his product.

Also with consumers in mind, the committee recommended that USDA conduct studies to find out what kinds of products consumers want -- including size, shape, color, flavor, etc. Then, USDA was urged, try to develop these products.

Among other recommendations of special interest to consumers was periodic appraisals of the food stamp, school lunch and other food distribution programs.

For protection of farm products, and resulting improved quality of foods on the market, research also was suggested on better containers, handling procedures and transportation equipment.

A WISH FOR YOU

I made a wish, that each passing day, something nice would come your way.
It's just a little wish you see--
the worthwhile things are all for free.
The wonder of the rising sun--
The hour of peace when day is done.
The way a tree grows straight and tall--
These simple things no doubt can bring -- the treasured thoughts to which we cling.
That's why I wish with each passing day, the good things of life will come your way.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

The Biography of SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL Taken from the 1962 Encyclopaedia Britannica.
Author: Herbert G. Nicholas, Oxford University, England

Sir Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, British statesman, was born on Nov. 30, 1874, at Blenheim palace, Oxfordshire, England. He was the son of Lord Randolph Churchill and Jennie, daughter of Leonard Jerome, of New York City. He was educated at Harrow and Sandhurst. Entering the army in 1895, he saw active war service with the Malakand field force (1897) and the Tirah expeditionary force (1898); attached to the 21st Lancers, he also served with the Nile expeditionary force and was present at the battle of Omdurman (1898). These campaigns gave him material for two brilliant books, The Story of the Malakand Field Force (1898) and The River War (1899). During the South African War (1899-1902) he was correspondent for the Morning Post and wrote an account of his experiences as London to Ladysmith via Pretoria (1900). He was taken prisoner by the Boers, but escaped.

Churchill was elected Conservative M.P. for Oldham in 1900 (having unsuccessfully contested the seat in 1899), and immediately made his mark in a house which expected great things from his father's son. He excelled in the set speech elaborately prepared on the classic models, but was not at first a ready speaker. Lord Balfour once said of him that he carried "heavy but not very mobile guns," and it was only later that he became a master in the cut and thrust of debate. He had a filial reverence for the political memory of his father and his Life of Lord Randolph Churchill (1906) is one of the most interesting political biographies in the language.

In 1904, when Joseph Chamberlain's tariff reform campaign seemed likely to turn the Conservatives into a party of protection, Churchill crossed the floor of the house and joined the Liberals. In the general election of 1906 he was returned for North-West Manchester and became undersecretary for the colonies in the Campbell-Bannerman government, 1905-08.

He soon won renown by his skill and authority in defending the policy of conciliation and self-government for South Africa. With his admission to the cabinet in 1908 as president of the board of trade his standing increased. His platform oratory had a vivacity, a boldness and an epigrammatic quality that stirred popular gatherings. Into the conflict that followed the rejection of the Lloyd George budget by the house of lords he threw himself with characteristic impetuosity. As home secretary (1909-11) he was responsible for carrying the Trade Boards act, directed against sweated industries, but was rather less successful in coping with the industrial disturbances of 1911.

Transferred to the admiralty later in the year, Churchill was explicitly enjoined by Herbert Asquith to put the navy into a state of "instant and constant readiness" in case of a German attack. He was not at first successful in creating the naval war staff which was generally thought desirable, but he did introduce many valuable reforms, both administrative and technical. When war came in 1914, it found the navy both efficient and prepared.

Churchill, who had been one of the most convinced supporters of the declaration of war on Germany, was the most strenuous advocate of aggressive land and sea campaigns. He carried out the Dardanelles enterprise of 1915 in face of the disapproval of the first sea lord, Sir John Fisher. Churchill left the admiralty for the duchy of Lancaster when the expedition proved a failure and Fisher resigned. When the Liberal government collapsed in the ensuing political crisis, Churchill abandoned politics for soldiering; he went on active service in France, where he commanded the 6th Royal Scots Fusiliers.

David Lloyd George, returning to power in 1917, recalled Churchill to office, first as minister of munitions and then as combined war and air minister (1918-21). But apart from his conspicuous part in the Irish settlement, Churchill began to be less in agreement with the premier. Lloyd George disapproved of the costly British intervention in the U.S.S.R. that Churchill promoted. To be given the colonial office instead of the exchequer in 1921 was a severe disappointment. In the collapse of the coalition in 1922 Churchill lost even his seat in parliament, after representing Dundee since 1908.

Two years of retirement followed, filled, with characteristic versatility, by painting and writing. In 1924 he was returned to parliament from Epping as a Constitutionalist. Stanley Baldwin appointed him chancellor of the exchequer and in 1925 he rejoined the Conservative party. He presided over the return to the gold standard (1925), with the accompanying "revenue duties" and the derating scheme of 1928, measures not unproductive of controversy either then or since. In the same period he completed his work The World Crisis (1923-29).

With the fall of the Conservative government in 1929 a breach developed between Churchill and Baldwin. It began over India, where Churchill was opposed to any abdication of British imperial power--an opposition which led to his exclusion from the National government of 1931. In the nine years that followed Churchill led the life of a private member of parliament, writing the life of his great ancestor the 1st duke of Marlborough and only intervening in public debate on issues that profoundly moved him. As the Ramsay MacDonald, Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain governments pursued their policies of conciliation and surrender to the threats of Adolf Hitler, Churchill's protests became ever louder and more insistent. From 1936 to 1938 he particularly warned against German rearmament and British unpreparedness. In the commons' debate on the Munich agreement he asserted that is was "a defeat without a war" and "only the beginning of the reckoning." In March 1939 he pressed for an all-party government and in May urged an immediate agreement with the U.S.S.R; to both proposals Chamberlain was cool.

However, on the British declaration of war on Sept. 3, 1939, Chamberlain in response to a wide popular demand appointed Churchill to his old post at the admiralty. His energy was soon felt not only within the department but also in the work of the cabinet. But the Norwegian defeats of April and May 1940 shook public confidence in Chamberlain's leadership, and on May 10, when the German armies entered the Low Countries, Chamberlain resigned to make way for the one leader, Churchill, who could form a national coalition government. Three days later Churchill made his celebrated speech to the commons in which he said, "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat." Parliament gave him a unanimous vote of confidence.

This confidence was sustained throughout the four and one-half years that followed, stimulated by Churchill's rocklike trust in Allied victory and his frank, memorable and dynamic oratory. The story of his war premiership is the history of the British war effort because more nearly than any other war leader in British history he both directed and personified it, combining with the premiership the ministry of defense and taking a tirelessly energetic personal interest in every detail of administration. At moments of crisis he crystallized the national will, as in his memorable declaration on the occasion of Dunkirk, "We shall go on to the end, whatever the cost may be," or in the decision to reinforce the middle east in the dangerous autumn of 1940, or in the pledge to the U.S.S.R. on June 22, 1941, "Any man or state who marches with Hitler is our foe."

To nothing did Churchill more earnestly devote himself than to the construction and maintenance of what he called the "Grand Alliance." From the outset he looked forward to the day when, "The New World, with all its power and might," would step "forth to the rescue and the liberation of the Old." Churchill's conduct of relations with the United States and its wartime president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was a remarkable blend of tact and candour, of a determination, as he said, not to "liquidate" the British empire and yet of a willingness to pool sovereignty and resources in a common cause.

With the U. S.S.R. he strove unceasingly to break down the barriers of misunderstanding--witness his dispatch to Moscow of Lord Beaverbrook in Sept. 1941, and of Anthony Eden in November and his own visit to Joseph Stalin in Aug. 1942. In Dec. 1941 he went to Washington, D. C., for the first of a series of conferences with Roosevelt. The year 1942 saw British reverses in Burma, Malaya and Hong Kong; but as U.S. strength gathered and the Russians fell back on Stalingrad, there was pressure on Churchill to agree to the opening of a second front in Europe. Churchill thought this premature and successfully opposed it.

Even for 1944 he personally advocated an invasion of central Europe from the Mediterranean to coincide with Normandy landings. However, Churchill's loyalty to an agreed strategy was as complete as his advocacy of his own views was powerful. Never in history had allied forces co-operated so harmoniously as in the strategy hammered out at the six planning conferences with Roosevelt and other leaders which Churchill attended in 1943.

The successes of 1944 brought new problems. At home and abroad Churchill was attacked for supporting allegedly reactionary regimes in Belgium, Italy and Greece. Meanwhile, his conversations in Moscow in October revealed the entering wedge of disagreements with the U.S.S.R. about eastern Europe.

The next year brought victory and great popular acclaim for Churchill. But the general election of June showed that this acclaim did not extend to Churchill, the Conservative party leader. Churchill bore the brunt of the election campaign himself, broadcasting and touring the country. But, although he retained his own seat, his party was severely defeated, and he began a long vigil as leader of the opposition.

During the first Labour government after World War II (1945-50) Churchill, still boundlessly energetic in his seventies, did not confine himself to parliamentary activities, master of debate though he still showed himself to be. He also embarked on a full-scale history of World War II (6 vol., 1948-53).

His concern for British security and world peace did not flag. On March 5, 1946, in a speech at Fulton, Mo., he sharply criticized growing Soviet imperialism and advocated a "fraternal association" of the English-speaking peoples. On Sept. 19, 1946, at Zurich, Switz., he urged a closer unity in Europe, following it up with personal support for the Council of Europe, the first assembly of which he attended at Strasbourg, Fr., in 1949.

In the 1950 general election Churchill again led the Conservative party, and the Labour majority was reduced to seven. After his party won the election of Oct. 1951, Churchill again became prime minister. Here his single-minded devotion was to the cause of world peace, and his efforts were continuously bent on the realization of "talks at the summit" with Soviet leaders. However, age obliged his resignation on April 5, 1955, with these hopes unrealized although, by one of history's ironies, his chosen successor, Sir Anthony Eden, was able a few weeks later to announce to a British electorate Soviet and U. S. agreement to a four-power conference at Geneva, Switz.

Peter Kiewit Sons, Inc.

I should like to start this morning by telling you that construction is our largest single industry; employs a peak of three million people; uses more than 70 per cent of all lumber production, 75 per cent of window glass production, 25 per cent of steel production, and practically all of the cement production. It is one of the nation's most competitive businesses. This is reflected in the fact that the average net profit construction corporations is 1.6 per cent of gross revenue as compared to a rate of over 5 per cent for all industry, and something over 800,000 contract construction firms are listed by the U. S. Department of Commerce as being engaged in this effort.

I had the honor of appearing on this panel in 1954, at which time I predicted a 5 per cent increase in construction volume, which actually turned out to be more than 10 per cent, and based my prediction on three things: (1) growth in population, (2) growth in per capita income, and (3) confidence in the economic future of our country.

During the last 10 years, population has increased 30 million, or an average of 2 per cent a year. Per capita income has gone up a third, and construction effort has grown from 39 billion to something over 66 billion dollars, or 7 per cent a year.

This growth in construction spending is impressive, but when we take into consideration the inflation in the six years following the Korean War and a more moderate rise in the last four years, for an average yearly increase of 5 per cent, we find that the actual physical gain in construction has been only 2 per cent a year -- which just keeps pace with the population growth during this 10-year period. It does not compensate for the higher per capita income and the resulting higher standard of living. Neither does it keep pace with the 2 per cent obsolescence factor that our Income Tax people recognize when they allow a 50-year life on capital improvements.

These facts prompt me to say that I do not think we are building fast enough to meet our needs and to maintain our place of leadership in the world.

I expect to see the total dollar volume of construction placed in 1965 go up by something less than 4 per cent, which is considerably below the 6.5 per cent currently estimated for 1964. I think construction costs, which have increase 1.5 per cent annually during recent years, may move at a faster tempo next year and that we will probably again have a physical increase of something on the order of 2 per cent, which follows the pattern of the last 10 years.

I look forward to a reduction in space, missile, and military construction. I look forward to a slow - down in construction of office buildings, apartments, and single family dwellings in many locations.

On the plus side, I think there will be more industrial plant construction to satisfy expansion requirements and to meet competitive pricing, both local and foreign. Commercial building will increase because of new suburban area development and modernization of core areas. I look for an increase in construction of highways, urban transportation, hospitals, schools, power facilities, and water use and control projects.

In closing I should like to say, anyone postponing construction in the hope of lower prices will, I think, be disappointed. Also, I should like to again emphasize that I think physical construction volume must increase if we are to continue to improve our over-all economic position and maintain our leadership in world affairs.

STAGE II

A. International Disarmament Organization:

The powers and responsibilities of the IDO shall be progressively enlarged in order to give it the capabilities to verify the measures undertaken in Stage II.

B. To Further Reduce Armed Forces and Armaments:

(a) Levels of forces for the U.S., U.S.S.R., and other militarily significant states shall be further reduced by substantial amounts to agreed levels in equitable and balanced steps.

(b) Levels of armaments of prescribed types shall be further reduced by equitable and balanced steps. The reduction shall be accomplished by transfers of armaments to depots supervised by the IDO. When, at specified periods during the Stage II reduction process, the parties have agreed that the armaments and armed forces are at prescribed levels, the armaments in depots shall be destroyed or converted to peaceful uses.

(c) There shall be further agreed restrictions on the production of armaments.

(d) Agreed military bases and facilities wherever they are located shall be dismantled or converted to peaceful uses.

(e) Depending upon the findings of the Experts Commission on CBR weapons, the production of CBR weapons shall be halted, existing stocks progressively reduced, and the resulting excess quantities destroyed or converted to peaceful uses.

C. To Further Reduce the Nuclear Threat:

Stocks of nuclear weapons shall be progressively reduced to the minimum levels which can be agreed upon as a result of the findings of the Nuclear Experts Commission; the resulting excess of fissionable material shall be transferred to peaceful purposes.

D. To Further Reduce Strategic Nuclear Weapons Delivery Vehicles:

Further reductions in the stocks of strategic nuclear weapons delivery vehicles and agreed types of weapons designed to counter such vehicles shall be carried out in accordance with the procedure outlined in Stage I.

E. To Keep the Peace:

During Stage II, states shall develop further the peace-keeping processes of the United Nations, to the end that the United Nations can effectively in Stage III deter or suppress any threat or use of force in violation of the purposes and principles of the United Nations:

(a) States shall agree upon strengthening the structure, authority, and operation of the United Nations so as to assure that the United Nations will be able effectively to protect states against threats to or breaches of the peace.

(b) The U.N. Peace Force shall be established and progressively strengthened.

(c) States shall also agree upon further improvements and developments in rules of international conduct and in processes for peaceful settlement of disputes and differences.

STAGE III

By the time Stage II has been completed, the confidence produced through a verified disarmament program, the acceptance of rules of peaceful international behavior, and the development of strengthened international peace - keeping processes within the framework of the U.N. should have reached a point where the states of the world can move forward to Stage III. In Stage III progressive controlled disarmament and continuously developing principles and procedures of international law would proceed to a point where no state would have the military power to challenge the progressively strengthened U. N. Peace Force and all international disputes would be settled according to the agreed principles of international conduct.

The progressive steps to be taken during the final phase of the disarmament program would be directed toward the attainment of a world in which:

(a) States would retain only those forces, non - nuclear armaments, and establishments required for the purpose of maintaining internal order; they would also support and provide agreed manpower for a U.N. Peace Force.

(b) The U.N. Peace Force, equipped with agreed types and quantities of armaments, would be fully functioning.

(c) The manufacture of armaments would be prohibited except for those of agreed types and quantities to be used by the U.N. Peace Force and those required to maintain internal order. All other armaments would be destroyed or converted to peaceful purposes.

(d) The peace-keeping capabilities of the United Nations would be sufficiently strong and the obligations of all states under such arrangements sufficiently far-reaching as to assure peace and the just settlement of differences in a disarmed world.

May Investigate Nazi, Minute Man Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Unamerican Activities will consider possible investigations this year into the activities of the American Nazi party and the Minutemen.

When and if such inquiries decided upon, they likely will be started in secret.

The committee, headed by Rep. Edwin E. Willis, D-La., has a longstanding policy against public disclosure of the results of investigations until and if they become the subject of public hearings.

Rep. Ronald Brooks Cameron, D-Calif., made public earlier this week a letter to Willis expressing concern about "the rise of such groups as the American Nazi party and the Minutemen" and urging a committee inquiry to "dramatize these existing evils and help mobilize public opinion against them."

The committee is known to have received other similar requests.

Robert de Pugh of Norborne, Mo., heads the Minutemen.

Things We Take For Granted

After Margaret and Harold left the church time seemed to fly for the happy couple. First they were greeted in Margaret's home by their many friends then there was a lovely dinner for the wedding party. Soon it was time for Margaret to slip back to her room to finish last minute packing and meet Harold. They had invited the members of the wedding party to go out dancing that night in a nearby town but they were all busy and had to get back home. So Margaret and Harold secretly happy to be alone, went on out to eat and go dancing.

They had returned to their motel and were discussing their trip back to Calif., for they planned to leave the next day. Suddenly they heard a loud knock at their door. Harold opened the door and who should be there to visit them at ten o'clock but part of their wedding party and their children. What a festive occasion that was. Their friends knew they were leaving the next day and decided to give the newly weds a real send off. In fact, even though a shivaree was no longer in style this party could almost be called one. Margaret and Harold were delighted because they knew so well the sincere good wishes that this party expened. Friendship is a thing that Margaret a Celebral Palsied girl, always valued and it made her feel good to know they wanted to be with she and her new husband on their last evening.

To the Editor:

No two minds are alike --just like fingerprints. Only from knowledge gained by the study of history -- starting with the greatest historical, and moral-guiding book of all time, --God's Holy Bible--can infinitesimal man be guided, for his own good -- and that of his descendants -- during his butterfly term upon God's earth.

Our learned, God - trusting Founding Fathers -- the only group of politicians in all history, not interested in satanic control of people --were guided by their Bible and studies of history.

To insure against a return to tyrannical bondage-- that they fought the revolutionary war to eliminate under socialist King George III--and ALL bondage and slavery of peoples from the days of Jesus Christ, down to the always, socialist-ridden European countries that the Pilgrims fled from -- they worked out the best man - made laws to insure freedoms -- in all history -- our U. S. Constitution.

Each state was a Republic unto itself, with its own State Legislature and Governor. The Federal government was created by the States -- with limited powers -- mostly for combined defense against foreign enemies, which throughout history had warred against each other --and trade with those were, at least temporarily friendly.

Their wise plans --NO MORE of the ageold, centralized, socialist, Federal tyranny--freedom of each sovereign state and the individuals therein to care for themselves -- unfettered free-enterprise --a stock of gold, in sufficient percentages to currency and government bonds issued, to guarantee redemption in gold--and to insure against unlimited issue of worthless, fiat paper -- to be used as money in buying votes of people, toward building and perpetuating a one-party socialist hierarchy -- refraining from alliances with foreign countries (except trade) that always, under new, power-hungry rulers war against each other--and later the Monroe Doctrine--to prevent foreign, ruthless rulers from a foothold in South America--from which they could later attack us through our back-door.

Is this hard for any mind to understand? Why have our people forgotten it all in 40 years, and voted for representatives from Presidents down, to destroy it? Why have we paid for a myriad of socialist educators in our schools and colleges, to teach our children--that all of this--which made America the richest country of free men's history--is all wrong--that for the best interest of all people we must return to the socialist-state form of government? With the socialist-state of Russia, before our very eyes, how could we be so blind?

The Pilgrims -- upon their knees thanked God for their food crops. Our Founding Fathers worshiped only their God. Thomas Jefferson said--"Away with trust in man--let us bind him with the chains of our constitution." But -- our people have transferred their trust and worship from God to men--like the Germans worshiped Hitler -- Italians, Mussolini --and the English, socialist labor - leaders after World War II.

All students know, that only God gives to us His life-giving sun, or His life-giving rain-water from His clouds every morning -- and His resurrection of Spring every year--with all of its beauty and warmth that produces life-giving food-crops. Will we resurrect our thankfulness to Him--and fight for Him? We cannot worship two masters. Or--will we continue meek conformity to the socialist demagogues--political, labor-leader, educator, clergy, communist and a host of other socialist to atheist leaders in all segments of our society--who are inciting and dividing us--thereby destroying thankfulness to God, and our beloved America and freedoms.

Today--now--for the second time in American history--all of us MUST "pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our Sacred Honor," to save our freedoms, our country and our proud, star-spangled-banner. Will we suffer the terrific deprivations necessary, to pay off our mammoth national debts --resurrect our U. S. Constitution, gold standard, national solvency, national independence, and national and individual self-respect?

The first step is for parents, grand and great grandparents, to STOP following, voting for and supporting ALL socialist demagogues. They were the ones who were fooled into destruction of our U. S. Constitution -- our gold standard -- unlimited deficit spending with fiat government bonds--creating the greatest national debt-bubble in all history, for their descendants to pay--all with lunatical blindness to the lessons of all history --that all empires and nations become bankrupt and has-beens, from socialism and deficit - spending.

Captain Williams said, "It was a very interesting and awarding experience. Although nothing unusual happened I feel that I can better fulfill my duties as a flight surgeon after having lived with the crews for a week."

Captain Williams entered the Air Force in July 1964, and arrived at Blytheville in September of the same year.

A native of Greensboro, GA., he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd J. Williams. He is a graduate of Emory University, Oxford, Ga., where he received his degree in medicine.

Captain and Mrs. Williams, the former Miss Alice Wagnon from Atlana, Ga., presently reside in downtown Blytheville.

Francis L. Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mills of Dexter, has been promoted to first lieutenant in the Air Force at Travis AFB, Calif.

May Investigate Nazi, Minute Man Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Committee on Unamerican Activities will consider possible investigations this year into the activities of the American Nazi party and the Minutemen.

When and if such inquiries decided upon, they likely will be started in secret.

The committee, headed by Rep. Edwin E. Willis, D-La., has a longstanding policy against public disclosure of the results of investigations until and if they become the subject of public hearings.

Rep. Ronald Brooks Cameron, D-Calif., made public earlier this week a letter to Willis expressing concern about "the rise of such groups as the American Nazi party and the Minutemen" and urging a committee inquiry to "dramatize these existing evils and help mobilize public opinion against them."

The committee is known to have received other similar requests.

Robert de Pugh of Norborne, Mo., heads the Minutemen.

Things We Take For Granted

After Margaret and Harold left the church time seemed to fly for the happy couple. First they were greeted in Margaret's home by their many friends then there was a lovely dinner for the wedding party. Soon it was time for Margaret to slip back to her room to finish last minute packing and meet Harold. They had invited the members of the wedding party to go out dancing that night in a nearby town but they were all busy and had to get back home. So Margaret and Harold secretly happy to be alone, went on out to eat and go dancing.

They had returned to their motel and were discussing their trip back to Calif., for they planned to leave the next day. Suddenly they heard a loud knock at their door. Harold opened the door and who should be there to visit them at ten o'clock but part of their wedding party and their children. What a festive occasion that was. Their friends knew they were leaving the next day and decided to give the newly weds a real send off. In fact, even though a shivaree was no longer in style this party could almost be called one. Margaret and Harold were delighted because they knew so well the sincere good wishes that this party expened. Friendship is a thing that Margaret a Celebral Palsied girl, always valued and it made her feel good to know they wanted to be with she and her new husband on their last evening.

More dishes are broken while drying than washing, the Addison, Ill., sink firm found. The highest rate of breakage of dishes is among young mothers while the lowest is among grandmothers, reported Earl Jensen, president of Jensen-Thorsen Corporation which questioned 600 homemakers on dish-washing breakage.

Most often broken are cups and glasses while large dinner plates have the lowest breakage rate. "Large plates and platters are more carefully handled both because they weigh more than other dishes and cost more," observed Jensen. "Cups break more easily because they are more fragile."

In its dish breakage survey, the stainless steel sink firm found that 70 per cent occurred in drying rather than washing. "Actually drying dishes takes more agility with the hands than washing," noted Jensen. "If a dish slips while drying, the fall is longer, too. In washing most homemakers usually have some type of cushioning in the sink and the chances of breakage are diminished.

"Young mothers have the highest rate of breakage, because they are subject to more distractions like youngsters and also do not have as much kitchen experience as older women, who follow a number of precautions to prevent breakage," Jensen continued.

Among tips to avoid dish breakage, Jensen suggests washing dishes in a plastic pan, orderly stacking of dishes in a plastic or rubberized rack, cushioning the partition in a double bowl and drying dishes over the counter rather than while walking to a cabinet.

How do husbands compare with wives on dish breakage? "Actually husbands break less dishes than their wives -- but mainly because they wash far fewer dishes than their wives," Jensen says.

Lightest Mexico

by John Abney

MEXICO CITY -- It has been a great year for the head-shrinking industry and conformation of the discovery that emotionally disturbed people develop more common colds than normal persons was an unexpected triumph.

And it says in this article that a number of researchers suspect repression may be one of the most powerful emotions affecting the onset of colds.

A graphic example of such things was found in some semi-original documents dating back almost to the Bronze Age when ancient Mexicans were plagued by common colds and a doctor name Bascomb Seven Serpents was doing research on the matter.

People could come dragging into his office complaining about nagging headaches and runny noses. When the doctor asked what they had been taking for it they would say things like tea with powered lizard or maybe wearing a necklace of wolf claws day and night but it was pretty clear that nothing h lped.

So this ancient document says that one day a fellow named Serpent Feet (no re ation) blurted out something unintentional that put Dr. Seven Serpents on the track.

In the presence of reliable witnesses, Serpent Feet said, "When I have a common cold I just put five or six tranquilizers in a cup of hot vodka and drink it down."

The doctor heard this and rushed up to ask, "Does it cure the cold immediately?"

And Serpent Feet answered, "Naw, doc, but with a jolt like that who cares?"

It started the doctor on a new course of thought and resulted in considerable friction between him and the Association of Tribal Medicine Men but a lot of people followed right along.

There are a couple of paragraphs about a lady who took her husband around to Dr. Seven Serpents' office to have him checked and the doctor asked how long he had had the cold.

So the wife said, "Spencer has been laid up about a month now and nothing this witch doctor that lives in the banyan tree by our house gives him does any good."

Then Dr. Seven Serpents asked, "Has Spencer been tense, edgy and unsettled lately?"

And the wife said, "No sir, he is real easy - going and doesn't get riled at anything."

The doctor nodded solemnly and said, "Madam, he is repressing negative emotions like anger, hate, resentment and fear. Since these things have remained unexpressed too long, Spencer came down with a common cold."

So the lady asked, "What happens if he begins expressing all these emotions? Sort of turns loose, say."

And the doctor answered, "Well, the authorities would give him free room and board for a while. However, Spencer will require some lengthy treatment because some people are chronic hurriers with insatiable ambitions and can't stand frustration."

Spencer got drunk that night and sneaked off to a five-day party some friends were holding and when he came back he was cured. Then his wife took him to Dr. Seven Serpents' office but the nurse came out and said she was sorry the doctor couldn't see anybody for a while because he was in bed with a terrible cold.

According to this document Dr. Seven Serpents was run out of town the same night and everything was forgotten until modern medics began herding up thoughts on the same theory.

Spring was in the air as Nat Wartels, a two-handicap golfer, stopped at a sporting-goods store just off New York's Times Square and bought a dozen golf balls.

Adding Convenience in Bath

One of the main reasons for modernizing an old bathroom or adding a new one is to achieve greater convenience for everyone in the home. The added beauty and comfort through new fixture designs and colors are important, but these advantages are lost if the bathroom remains cramped and uncomfortable.

If only one bathroom is available for adults, two lavatories are advisable. A twin installation in the children's bathroom is a good idea, too, not only because it can be used simultaneously by youngsters to wash up before school and bedtime, but also because children take pride in their possessions and so will be helped to develop cleanliness habits.

Where there is room for only one lavatory, it should be generous in size, providing ample bowl room and ledges. Where space allows, the larger the bowls, the more convenient the bathroom even in a twin installation.

While bathroom fixtures have been available in color for decades, new shades introduced recently offer the modernizing homemaker the choice of many elegant tones, including tan shades, such as Spice Mocha, and subtle pinks. The new hues permit more use of yellow, rust, gold and olive for accessories to achieve a decor which can vary from antique to Colonial or modern.

New designs in fixtures add luxury and minimize maintenance. Growing in popularity are the single-control faucets, now available for the bath and shower as well as lavatories. These fittings have a single knob to control water volume and temperature simultaneously, and many are washerless.

Faucets and flushing mechanisms are the only "working parts" in a bathroom. When a new toilet is installed, it's wise to make sure the mechanism is designed to insure against dripping water and lever jiggling.

As the average human height reaches taller dimensions a large size tub for comfortable bathing gains importance. Sixteen-inch sides and a five and a half-foot length will provide bathing room.

MIRRORS AND STREAMLINED FIXTURES can give a small powder room a feeling of spaciousness. Lavatory with off-center bowl provides ledge space, and the countertop installation adds grooming and storage areas. Photo courtesy American-Standard.

A graphic example of such things was found in some semi-original documents dating back almost to the Bronze Age when ancient Mexicans were plagued by common colds and a doctor name Bascomb Seven Serpents was doing research on the matter.

People could come dragging into his office complaining about nagging headaches and runny noses. When the doctor asked what they had been taking for it they would say things like tea with powered lizard or maybe wearing a necklace of wolf claws day and night but it was pretty clear that nothing helped.

So this ancient document says that one day a fellow named Serpent Feet (no relation) blurted out something unintentional that put Dr. Seven Serpents on the track.

In the presence of reliable witnesses, Serpent Feet said, "When I have a common cold I just put five or six tranquilizers in a cup of hot vodka and drink it down."

The doctor heard this and rushed up to ask, "Does it cure the cold immediately?"

And Serpent Feet answered, "Naw, doc, but with a jolt like that who cares?"

It started the doctor on a new course of thought and resulted in considerable friction between him and the Association of Tribal Medicine Men but a lot of people followed right along.

There are a couple of paragraphs about a lady who took her husband around to Dr. Seven Serpents' office to have him checked and the doctor asked how long he had had the cold.

So the wife said, "Spencer has been laid up about a month now and nothing this witch doctor that lives in the banyan tree by our house gives him does any good."

Then Dr. Seven Serpents asked, "Has Spencer been tense, edgy and unsettled lately?"

And the wife said, "No sir, he is real easy - going and doesn't get riled at anything."

The doctor nodded solemnly and said, "Madam, he is repressing negative emotions like anger, hate, resentment and fear. Since these things have remained unexpressed too long, Spencer came down with a common cold."

So the lady asked, "What happens if he begins expressing all these emotions? Sort of turns loose, say."

And the doctor answered, "Well, the authorities would give him free room and board for a while. However, Spencer will require some lengthy treatment because some people are chronic hurriers with insatiable ambitions and can't stand frustration."

Spencer got drunk that night and sneaked off to a five-day party some friends were holding and when he came back he was cured. Then his wife took him to Dr. Seven Serpents' office but the nurse came out and said she was sorry the doctor couldn't see anybody for a while because he was in bed with a terrible cold.

According to this document Dr. Seven Serpents was run out of town the same night and everything was forgotten until modern medics began herding up thoughts on the same theory.

Spring was in the air as Nat Wartels, a two-handicap golfer, stopped at a sporting-goods store just off New York's Times Square and bought a dozen golf balls.

HAIR AFTER TWENTY YEARS--Fifty - eight-year-old A. Adding Convenience in Bath

One of the main reasons for modernizing an old bathroom or adding a new one is to achieve greater convenience for everyone in the home. The added beauty and comfort through new fixture designs and colors are important, but these advantages are lost if the bathroom remains cramped and uncomfortable.

If only one bathroom is available for adults, two lavatories are advisable. A twin installation in the children's bathroom is a good idea, too, not only because it can be used simultaneously by youngsters to wash up before school and bedtime, but also because children take pride in their possessions and so will be helped to develop cleanliness habits.

Where there is room for only one lavatory, it should be generous in size, providing ample bowl room and ledges. Where space allows, the larger the bowls, the more convenient the bathroom even in a twin installation.

While bathroom fixtures have been available in color for decades, new shades introduced recently offer the modernizing homemaker the choice of many elegant tones, including tan shades, such as Spice Mocha, and subtle pinks. The new hues permit more use of yellow, rust, gold and olive for accessories to achieve a decor which can vary from antique to Colonial or modern.

New designs in fixtures add luxury and minimize maintenance. Growing in popularity are the single-control faucets, now available for the bath and shower as well as lavatories. These fittings have a single knob to control water volume and temperature simultaneously, and many are washerless.

Faucets and flushing mechanisms are the only "working parts" in a bathroom. When a new toilet is installed, it's wise to make sure the mechanism is designed to insure against dripping water and lever jiggling.

As the average human height reaches taller dimensions a large size tub for comfortable bathing gains importance. Six-teen-inch sides and a five and a half-foot length will provide bathing room.

Looking Back Over the Years

January 25, 1915

Miss Ione Rhodes of Bollinger County, has accepted the position of cashier and stenographer with the Southwestern Telephone Co., vice Miss Effie Inman.

Thomas Simpson arrived in our city from Caruthersville last week to accept a position in Dr. W. E. Derris' Drug Store while the owner is in Las Crucas, N. M., with his wife, who is away for her health.

40 years ago
January 25, 1925

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Dempster have given the Presbyterian Church of this city a lot in the Chamber of Commerce Addition, on which they hope to build a church in the near future.

Alfred Bloomfield left Sikeston this week for El Paso, Tex., where he goes in quest of health. Alfred has as many friends and well wishers in this community as any young man who ever lived here, and everyone of them wish him health and prosperity. Mrs. Bloomfield and Little Abe expect to follow later.

The Remley Hotel Co., has written to John A. Young to have him advise them as to Sikeston as a point to build a modern fire-proof hotel building. It is a fair prospect and Sikeston is the cross roads to everywhere now, and the place where all live wires wish to locate.

John Albritton of this city and Miss Grace Holmes of Morehouse were married on January 12th.

January 25, 1935

Kenneth Hocker, a member of Miss Frances Burch's junior English class, won third place in a folk drama writing contest conducted annually by the Southeast Missouri State Teachers' College in Cape Girardeau, superintendent Roy V. Ellise learned Friday.

Shirley Jean Smith and Jimmie Sexton are absent from school on account of illness.

For Today From The Upper Room

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: My God, in him will I trust. (Psalm 91:2)

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, in the quietness of these moments of meditation we turn our thoughts to Thee. In the work of our daily life may we ever think of Thee, whose we are and whom we serve. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

AP Finds 91 percent of the House are for Health Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Associated Press has polled 91 per cent of the members of the House of Representatives and found that a majority favor enactment of legislation to provide health care for the aged.

More than half the congressmen questioned or, to put it another way, slightly less than half the full House, either support outright or are inclined to support President Johnson's program.

The proposal calls for hospital and related benefits for elderly Americans administered through the Social Security system and financed through a separate addition to the payroll tax.

Results of the poll, which reached 396 of the 435 House members, strongly suggest that a health-care plan will be enacted this year.

Last year medical care for the aged was approved by the Senate but foundered and died in the House.

Monday, a fresh start begins when the newly reconstituted Ways and Means Committee meets to lay out a schedule for the bill, its No. 1 business, and other matters. Executive sessions may be held later on details of the measure. The target date for House consideration is sometime in March.

Of the 396 House members questioned by Associated Press reporters, 175 said they support the Johnson proposal and 25 that they are inclined to do so. There are 435 members of the House, so 218 is a clear majority.

But the administration appears to have good prospects of picking up additional votes among the 196 members who did not declare themselves at present for the Johnson plan, as well as the 39 who could not be reached.

Only 21 spoke out flatly against any further governmental activity in the field. Twenty-five refused to participate in the poll; 29 said they wanted more time to make up their minds; 6 said they were inclined to vote against the Johnson measure, but not certain to do so.

The biggest group among those not favoring the administration plan included the 115 representatives who said they wanted to see some legislative action in the field other than the administration version.

Republicans have announced they will present an alternative plan. It is expected to involve use of private health insurance.

Spradling to Introduce bill On Collection

ST. LOUIS (AP) —Legislation to insure that Department of Revenue collections are deposited immediately in the state treasury will be introduced by state Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr., Cape Girardeau, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat reported Saturday.

It was reported this week that motor vehicle and driver license fees collected by 137 revenue department branch offices throughout the state will be put in department bank accounts and then transferred to the state treasurer.

This system was abandoned four years ago in the administration of Gov. John M. Dalton after criticism by the Missouri Public Expenditures Survey and a joint legislative committee on taxes.

It was charged then that such a practice deprived the state of the use or investment of the funds because of a lag in transmitting money from revenue department accounts to the state treasurer.

Sen. Spradling, who was a member of the joint legislative committee that criticized this system, told the newspaper the matter of transmitting funds immediately to the state treasurer should not be left to administrative discretion, but should be spelled out by statute.

Meanwhile, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, State Treasurer M.E. Morris and State Auditor Haskell Holman have sought an opinion by Atty. Gen. Norman Anderson of the legality of the resumed practice of routing motor vehicle and driver license fees through revenue department bank accounts.

A one-day conference on matters affecting navigation on the Mississippi River and its tributaries will be held in the Zodiac Room of the Chase-Park Plaza Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday, February 6, sponsored jointly by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Coast Guard.

This "Navigation Conference" is a prelude to the Annual Meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association. The morning session will be held from 9:30 a.m. until noon, with Maj. Gen. Ellsworth I. Davis, Division Engineer, Lower Mississippi Valley Division, Vicksburg, Miss., presiding. The afternoon session, from 2:00 until 3:30 p.m., will be conducted by Adm. Albert J. Carpenter, Commanding Officer, Second Coast Guard District, St. Louis.

This open meeting will give barge line operators, shippers, port operators, and other users of inland water transportation an opportunity to express their views to the Federal agencies on improvements in procedures and facilities they consider should be undertaken to make barge navigation better and safer on the waterways within the Lower Mississippi Valley Division from St. Louis to the Gulf of Mexico.

The agenda for the meeting includes talks on problems and recommendations from the standpoint of common carrier, contract carrier, and private carrier operations on the Mississippi River. Speaking for the common carriers on the program will be Jack D. Wofford, Vice-President of Operations, American Commercial Barge Line, Jeffersonville, Ind.; for the contract carriers, G. H. Chapman, Vice-President, Upper Mississippi Towing Corporation, Minneapolis, Minn.; and for the private carriers, M. R. Spellacy, Manager, Marine Division, Inland Waterways Department, Humble Oil and Refining Company, Houston, Texas.

Following these presentations, the meeting will be open for statements and discussion from the floor.

In addition to General Davis, Corps of Engineers representatives who will be in attendance to consider matters presented at the meeting include J. Ira Boswell, Chief, Construction-Operations Division, and J. R. Griffith, Chief, Operations Branch, both of LMVD, as well as civilian engineers familiar with navigation conditions from each of the Engineer District offices at St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg, and New Orleans. Other Division Engineers expected to attend are Maj. Gen. George H. Walker, Missouri River Division, Omaha, Nebr.; Brig. Gen. Roy T. Dodge, North Central Division, Chicago; and Brig. Gen. Walter P. Leber, Ohio River Division, Cincinnati.

The afternoon session will include discussions on the legal aspects of damages to aids to navigation, forthcoming changes in types of navigation aids on the Mississippi River system, and a summary of Coast Guard operations affecting aids to navigation for the preceding navigation season.

Persons interested in navigation matters pertaining to the Mississippi River system are cordially invited to attend this conference.

Polly

DEAR POLLY—When sewing lace edging on any garment, it is quite difficult to gather the lace into even and regular ruffles. Look at the top edge of the lace where there are a number of threads that run horizontally. With a needle, pull gently at these threads until you find one that is free and loose. Slowly pull this thread and it will gather the entire length of lace. It is easier to baste this gathered ruffle to the hem or skirt.—MARGARET

GIRLS—This letter was a reminder to me, for my mother always gathered lace this way. I had almost forgotten and it is so easy.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Tack a rubber stair tread to the seat of your child's outdoor swing. This tread protects the youngsters from splinters, shields the board seat from rain and will help prevent the children from accidentally sliding off and hurting themselves.—F. L.

DEAR POLLY—If you do much sewing on your machine, quite a bit of thread can be saved when sewing on small pieces. Don't pull the thread and cut it every time you come to the end of the cloth. Put another piece of cloth close to the one just sewn and continue on to another and another. Pull and clip the thread only when all the small pieces are finished. —THELMA

DEAR POLLY—Wrap a strip of velvet along the length of a towel rack and screw the rack to the back of a closet door for use as a "ribbon bar." Even the most slippery of ribbons or scarves will not fall off the velvet and they do not get tangled.—MARCIA

DEAR POLLY—My kitchen window is very near the stove so I contrived curtain covers to keep the curtains from getting splattered with grease. I have cafe curtains so this hint is for windows that have a rod midway up the window. Take a terry cloth dish or bath towel and hang over the curtains. Use plastic clothespins to clip to the rod. If curtains are very wide, two towels may be necessary as they are hung lengthwise. It takes only a second to put them on and I can fry chicken with a free mind and no worries over spotted curtains.—ANGELA

Washington, D. C.

Mr. Charlie;

I'm writing from Wash., D. C. where I have just attended most of the inaugural activities. I was also able to attend several of the pre - inaugural parties through the efforts of our representatives from Missouri.

Through Sen. Stuart Symington I went to the big reception given by Mr. Auggie Busch of St. Louis for the Mo. Citizens for Johnson and Humphrey. I know you would have enjoyed this one because Eva Gabor was there among many other dignitaries and celeberities.

Our own 10th Dist. Rep. Paul Jones was particularly helpful and saw to it that all of us were able to attend the swearing in ceremonies and also had a buffet luncheon before the parade.

Our fine new Gov. from Mo. Warren Hearnes and his lovely wife also represented us up here and looked very impressive in the parade and at the ball where they were just as friendly and sincere as they are down at home.

It's gratifying to know that our elected officials, whom we sometimes think of as rather distant, actually take a personal interest in all of us.

I'm not as worried about the countries economy, I know I saw enough minks and limousines last night to pay off the national debt twice.

I suppose you can tell I'm quite impressed by it all, but I honestly believe anyone who comes up here will go away feeling a little better about our leaders and the future of our country.

Sincerely,
Bill Lewis

United Nations Faces Most Serious Threats

BY BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It has just had its first ominous withdrawal, Indonesia, the world's fifth most populous country.

Its dues-paying crisis, precipitated by the Soviet Union's refusal to get money up for peacekeeping operations it dislikes, has compelled—at least temporarily—a system of informal voting which disrupts orderly procedures in the 11-nation Security Council.

In the December debates over U.S.-Belgian air rescues of hostages in the Congo, the racist mood so afflicted some African radicals that a few were heard to remark the "inadvisability" of one African leader having two white consultants constantly at his elbow.

Corridor comment of this kind, often considerably more biting than even the sharpest of the radicals' formal utterances in the debate, has led some observers to argue that the general atmosphere at the United Nations is deteriorating in a welter of emotionalism.

ONE U. S. OFFICIAL SUGGESTS that an extension of this mood over a period of several years, a not inconceivable prospect in light of the growing numerical prominence of the Afro-Asian countries, could have a "serious impact" on the conduct of U.N. affairs.

Yet, despite the extremely turbulent air that is now jostling the United Nations, American officials are insistently hopeful that the now greatly swollen agency will keep its balance and will, in fact, resort to a number of strengthening mechanisms. We shall consider these in another column.

Notwithstanding this dogged confidence in the U.N.'s future, specialists in the international field can enumerate very real and fundamental perils:

1. THE SEVERE CRIMP that could be put in the agency's vital peacekeeping function if some durable, trustworthy system of financing is not agreed upon by the major powers.

2. THE NOTABLE MALAPPORTIONMENT between strength of numbers in the General Assembly (with consequent influence on recommendations), and responsibility for peacekeeping, general financing, and other U.N. matters.

3. THE PROSPECT THAT MANY of the U.N.'s still-rising numbers, awash in the emotionalism that gave spur to their new-found independence, could combine steadily to throw the Assembly's weight behind purely "symbolic" declarations almost totally unproductive of real "working gains" in the world's welfare.

4. THE CHANCE, only a faint threat today, that any redressing of the power-responsibility balance in the United Nations might gravely disaffect many in the Afro-Asian group and cause them to seek their own counsel. Irresponsible Indonesia's withdrawal has, unhappily, broken the ice.

AP Finds 91 percent of the House are for Health Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Associated Press has polled 91 per cent of the members of the House of Representatives and found that a majority favor enactment of legislation to provide health care for the aged.

More than half the congressmen questioned or, to put it another way, slightly less than half the full House, either support outright or are inclined to support President Johnson's program.

The proposal calls for hospital and related benefits for elderly Americans administered through the Social Security system and financed through a separate addition to the payroll tax.

Results of the poll, which reached 396 of the 435 House members, strongly suggest that a health-care plan will be enacted this year.

Last year medical care for the aged was approved by the Senate but foundered and died in the House.

Monday, a fresh start begins when the newly reconstituted Ways and Means Committee meets to lay out a schedule for the bill, its No. 1 business, and other matters. Executive sessions may be held later on details of the measure. The target date for House consideration is sometime in March.

Of the 396 House members questioned by Associated Press reporters, 175 said they support the Johnson proposal and 25 that they are inclined to do so. There are 435 members of the House, so 218 is a clear majority.

But the administration appears to have good prospects of picking up additional votes among the 196 members who did not declare themselves at present for the Johnson plan, as well as the 39 who could not be reached.

Only 21 spoke out flatly against any further governmental activity in the field. Twenty-five refused to participate in the poll; 29 said they wanted more time to make up their minds; 6 said they were inclined to vote against the Johnson measure, but not certain to do so.

The biggest group among those not favoring the administration plan included the 115 representatives who said they wanted to see some legislative action in the field other than the administration version.

Republicans have announced they will present an alternative plan. It is expected to involve use of private health insurance.

Spradling to Introduce bill On Collection

ST. LOUIS (AP) —Legislation to insure that Department of Revenue collections are deposited immediately in the state treasury will be introduced by state Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr., Cape Girardeau, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat reported Saturday.

It was reported this week that motor vehicle and driver license fees collected by 137 revenue department branch offices throughout the state will be put in department bank accounts and then transferred to the state treasurer.

This system was abandoned four years ago in the administration of Gov. John M. Dalton after criticism by the Missouri Public Expenditures Survey and a joint legislative committee on taxes.

It was charged then that such a practice deprived the state of the use or investment of the funds because of a lag in transmitting money from revenue department accounts to the state treasurer.

Sen. Spradling, who was a member of the joint legislative committee that criticized this system, told the newspaper the matter of transmitting funds immediately to the state treasurer should not be left to administrative discretion, but should be spelled out by statute.

Meanwhile, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, State Treasurer M. E. Morris and State Auditor Haskell Holman have sought an opinion by Atty. Gen. Norman Anderson of the legality of the resumed practice of routing motor vehicle and driver license fees through revenue department bank accounts.

A one-day conference on matters affecting navigation on the Mississippi River and its tributaries will be held in the Zodiac Room of the Chase-Park Plaza Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday, February 6, sponsored jointly by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Coast Guard.

This "Navigation Conference" is a prelude to the Annual Meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association. The morning session will be held from 9:30 a.m. until noon, with Maj. Gen. Ellsworth I. Davis, Division Engineer, Lower Mississippi Valley Division, Vicksburg, Miss., presiding. The afternoon session, from 2:00 until 3:30 p.m., will be conducted by Adm. Albert J. Carpenter, Commanding Officer, Second Coast Guard District, St. Louis.

This open meeting will give barge line operators, shippers, port operators, and other users of inland water transportation an opportunity to express their views to the Federal agencies on improvements in procedures and facilities they consider should be undertaken to make barge navigation better and safer on the waterways within the Lower Mississippi Valley Division from St. Louis to the Gulf of Mexico.

The agenda for the meeting includes talks on problems and recommendations from the standpoint of common carrier, contract carrier, and private carrier operations on the Mississippi River. Speaking for the common carriers on the program will be Jack D. Wofford, Vice-President of Operations, American Commercial Barge Line, Jeffersonville, Ind.; for the contract carriers, G. H. Chapman, Vice-President, Upper Mississippi Towing Corporation, Minneapolis, Minn.; and for the private carriers, M. R. Spellacy, Manager, Marine Division, Inland Waterways Department, Humble Oil and Refining Company, Houston, Texas.

Following these presentations, the meeting will be open for statements and discussion from the floor.

In addition to General Davis, Corps of Engineers representatives who will be in attendance to consider matters presented at the meeting include J. Ira Boswell, Chief, Construction-Operations Division, and J. R. Griffith, Chief, Operations Branch, both of LMVD, as well as civilian engineers familiar with navigation conditions from each of the Engineer District offices at St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg, and New Orleans. Other Division Engineers expected to attend are Maj. Gen. George H. Walker, Missouri River Division, Omaha, Nebr.; Brig. Gen. Roy T. Dodge, North Central Division, Chicago; and Brig. Gen. Walter P. Leber, Ohio River Division, Cincinnati.

The afternoon session will include discussions on the legal aspects of damages to aids to navigation, forthcoming changes in types of navigation aids on the Mississippi River system, and a summary of Coast Guard operations affecting aids to navigation for the preceding navigation season.

Persons interested in navigation matters pertaining to the Mississippi River system are cordially invited to attend this conference.

Mr. Charlie;

I'm writing from Wash., D. C. where I have just attended most of the inaugural activities. I was also able to attend several of the pre - inaugural parties through the efforts of our representatives from Missouri.

Through Sen. Stuart Symington I went to the big reception given by Mr. Auggie Busch of St. Louis for the Mo. Citizens for Johnson and Humphrey. I know you would have enjoyed this one because Eva Gabor was there among many other dignitaries and celeberities.

Our own 10th Dist. Rep. Paul Jones was particularly helpful and saw to it that all of us were able to attend the swearing in ceremonies and also had a buffet luncheon before the parade.

Our fine new Gov. from Mo. Warren Hearnes and his lovely wife also represented us up here and looked very impressive in the parade and at the ball where they were just as friendly and sincere as they are down at home.

It's gratifying to know that our elected officials, whom we sometimes think of as rather distant, actually take a personal interest in all of us.

I'm not as worried about the countries economy, I know I saw enough minks and limousines last night to pay off the national debt twice.

I suppose you can tell I'm quite impressed by it all, but I honestly believe anyone who comes up here will go away feeling a little better about our leaders and the future of our country.

Sincerely,
Bill Lewis

Polly's Pointers

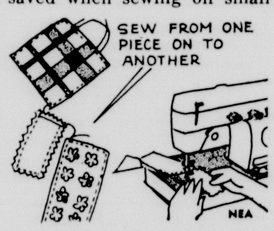
Polly

DEAR POLLY—When sewing lace edging on any garment, it is quite difficult to gather the lace into even and regular ruffles. Look at the top edge of the lace where there are a number of threads that run horizontally. With a needle, pull gently at these threads until you find one that is free and loose. Slowly pull this thread and it will gather the entire length of lace. It is easier to baste this gathered ruffle to the hem or skirt.—MARGARET

GIRLS—This letter was a reminder to me, for my mother always gathered lace this way. I had almost forgotten and it is so easy.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Tack a rubber stair tread to the seat of your child's outdoor swing. This tread protects the youngsters from splinters, shields the board seat from rain and will help prevent the children from accidentally sliding off and hurting themselves.—F. L.

DEAR POLLY—If you do much sewing on your machine, quite a bit of thread can be saved when sewing on small pieces. Don't pull the thread and cut it every time you come to the end of the cloth. Put another piece of cloth close to the one just sewn and continue on to another and another. Pull and clip the thread only when all the small pieces are finished. —THELMA



DEAR POLLY—Wrap a strip of velvet along the length of a towel rack and screw the rack to the back of a closet door for use as a "ribbon bar." Even the most slippery of ribbons or scarves will not fall off the velvet and they do not get tangled.—MARCIA

DEAR POLLY—My kitchen window is very near the stove so I contrived curtain covers to keep the curtains from getting splattered with grease. I have cafe curtains so this hint is for windows that have a rod midway up the window. Take a terry cloth dish or bath towel and hang over the curtains. Use plastic clothespins to clip to the rod. If curtains are very wide, two towels may be necessary as they are hung lengthwise. It takes only a second to put them on and I can fry chicken with a free mind and no worries over spotted curtains.—ANGELA

Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It has just had its first ominous withdrawal, Indonesia, the world's fifth most populous country.

Its dues-paying crisis, precipitated by the Soviet Union's refusal to get money up for peacekeeping operations it dislikes, has compelled—at least temporarily—a system of informal voting which disrupts orderly procedures in the 11-nation Security Council.

In the December debates over U.S.-Belgian air rescues of hostages in the Congo, the racist mood so afflicted some African radicals that a few were heard to remark the "inadvisability" of one African leader having two white consultants constantly at his elbow.

Corridor comment of this kind, often considerably more biting than even the sharpest of the radicals' formal utterances in the debate, has led some observers to argue that the general atmosphere at the United Nations is deteriorating in a welter of emotionalism.

ONE U. S. OFFICIAL SUGGESTS that an extension of this mood over a period of several years, a not inconceivable prospect in light of the growing numerical prominence of the Afro-Asian countries, could have a "serious impact" on the conduct of U.N. affairs.

Yet, despite the extremely turbulent air that is now jostling the United Nations, American officials are insistently hopeful that the now greatly swollen agency will keep its balance and will, in fact, resort to a number of strengthening mechanisms. We shall consider these in another column.

Notwithstanding this dogged confidence in the U.N.'s future, specialists in the international field can enumerate very real and fundamental perils:

1. THE SEVERE CRIMP that could be put in the agency's vital peacekeeping function if some durable, trustworthy system of financing is not agreed upon by the major powers.

2. THE NOTABLE MALAPPORTIONMENT between strength of numbers in the General Assembly (with consequent influence on recommendations), and responsibility for peacekeeping, general financing, and other U.N. matters.

3. THE PROSPECT THAT MANY of the U.N.'s still-rising numbers, awash in the emotionalism that gave spur to their new-found independence, could combine steadily to throw the Assembly's weight behind purely "symbolic" declarations almost totally unproductive of real "working gains" in the world's welfare.

4. THE CHANCE, only a faint threat today, that any redressing of the power-responsibility balance in the United Nations might gravely disaffect many in the Afro-Asian group and cause them to seek their own counsel. Irresponsible Indonesia's withdrawal has, unhappily, broken the ice.

Honor Among Thieves:

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA) It's easy to find Honor Blackman in a haystack, especially when she is wearing mauve suede slacks, a lavender silk shirt with a neckline that doesn't stay put and is busily using judo to toss James Bond on his ear, and vice versa.

Joan Crosby

On her first trip to the United States she settled in a 50th floor aerie in a hotel where the switchboard operator insisted she was "Honorable Blackman." She peeked out the window, looked at the fog which shrouded the city's spires, and said, "It's just like home."

Home (London) is the place where Honor is known as the girl who has proved sadism can be fun; a judo chop, sheer joy.

Before she tackled James Bond, she was the queen of British television as Cathy Gale, an 007ette, in the popular series The Avengers. The difference between the two characters is basic, Honor says.

"Cathy was not allowed to be sexy. We had all sorts of dramas after the show went on the air. The press said Cathy was a great, stalking deviate dressed in black leather and boots. So I went to the producer and said, 'I must have a lover' and he said 'That's your problem' and I said he misunderstood and we had a great long fight.

"I finally was allowed to fall in love, but I was told 'mustn't touch.' It was all very implicit, rather than explicit.

"But," Honor said, stretching her legs, clad in gray flannel slacks, "one night as I was bashing around on the mat taking my judo instruction, I asked my instructor what he thought about Cathy having a lover. He analyzed it perfectly. He said men watching the show didn't want to see Cathy being mauled by anyone else."

As a result of her role in The Avengers, Honor has an orange belt in judo. "I also have gold on the brain," she said, "so I shall only go after a black belt for money, not love. For two years I had black and blue marks all over me, and purple shoulders. I hated to wear a dress because of the great mass of bruises on my legs."

The casting of Honor in "Goldfinger" was a direct result of her role in The Avengers. Prior to that breakthrough, she had spent 15 years playing roles she describes as "English rose." "For The Avengers, they were looking for someone with a lot of acting experience. They should have given me a medical, that's what I needed."

After the rugged going in The Avengers, when Honor performed all her own stunts, she found her judo match with Sean Connery in "Goldfinger" the ultimate in luxury.

"As a matter of fact, they provided me with a double for the scene where I fly through the air and land in the hay, but I preferred to do it myself. They gave me a mattress under the hay to land on. I never had it so good."

Honor, who is married to actor Maurice Kaufman, says her experience in The Avengers has helped her. She learned to control her temper, and she was able to get rid of "my great streak of violence" and get paid for it.

"God knows what will happen now that I am through being violent. But it really helps you control yourself when you know you can chuck someone out the window if you want to."

IT'S UP TO YOU

By Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

A GOOD JOB REFUSED

This is a story of a woodworking plant that could not hire men at good wages right in the heart of the poverty area of Kentucky where there is so much unemployment. The company buys large quantities of hickory billets, and last year it sent three men into Eastern Kentucky to locate standing hickory and to hire men to split up the billets. An abundance of hickory timber was located, but labor to do the work was not available. Not one single billet was produced and all the money spent cruising to find timber and to hire men was wasted.

It is strange indeed that with all the unemployment and poverty in that area no men could be found to do work that is not disagreeable and at good wages. I say the work is not disagreeable because I used to do it myself when I was a boy. Working in timber is rather pleasant and 6 1/2¢ for a 16 inch hickory billet can certainly be considered satisfactory wages. The company offered to finance the operation, but even so, workers could not be found.

Presumably, it is more attractive to sit and wait for the governor's big Anti - Poverty Campaign to move in than to do hard work in the timber getting out hickory billets. If our government teaches the people that they can live without work, it will be a sad day for our formerly free and wonderful country.

A dispatch from Bonn, Germany, states that automation is displacing about 1.5 million West German workers per year. Nevertheless, there are 6 jobs waiting for every man who files a job application in the West German Republic. Obviously, automation is creating jobs. Furthermore, 1 million foreign workers are now employed in Germany and more are being sought.

In brief, the reasons for this phenomenon are a balanced budget, sound money, no inflation and a wage price level that enables German businessmen to compete successfully for their own markets and markets of the world.

Another very important factor is the practice of permitting beginners to become apprentices at low wages. As these boys acquire skill and experience, their wages rise to the standard level, but meanwhile, unemployment is not forced upon them because they are unable to give value received at standard wage rates. A little realized fact in our country is that minimum wages for people with insufficient skill to earn them results in unemployment. That plus the fact that large numbers of persons in our country plan to work only a part of the time and draw unemployment relief the remainder, is the cause for the high ratio of unemployed in the teenage group.

The Bonn Republic seems to have solved the problems of automation and unemployment among teenagers by the application of sound common sense. Is there any reason why our country should not profit by this example?

Robert Taft Jr., tells the GOP to think more and talk less. Very good advice for all of us.

Honor Among Thieves:

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA) It's easy to find Honor Blackman in a haystack, especially when she is wearing mauve suede slacks, a lavender silk shirt with a neckline that doesn't stay put and is busily using judo to toss James Bond on his ear, and vice versa.
